Sen. McGovern leads Calif. primary race

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — George McGovern bolted into an early lead over Hubert Humphrey in the crucial California primary Tuesday night as the first trickle of returns filtered through a massive legal snarl that delayed vote counting throughout most of the state for hours.

With 1 per cent of the vote reporting, McGovern led by a margin of 52 to 37 per cent.

California Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. ordered county election officials not to release or even count votes until 11 p.m. (2 a.m. edt). A federal court order to keep the polls open in San Francisco until that hour prompted the secretary of state's ruling.

But the word did not get through at once to at least 4 of the 58 counties, including the San Francisco suburb of San Mateo where McGovern took the lead based on scattered returns. He also led big in the three other counties.

Meantime, McGovern won the New Mexico primary over Alabama Gov. George Wallace and the South Dakota contest where he was unopposed. Early returns from New Jersey placed McGovern in the lead there.

Returns counted by midnight showed McGovern had 49 of the New Jersey delegates and was leading in seven more races.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace ran a surprising second in New Mexico, nudging Humphrey out of his expected substantial share of the delegates.

At stake in the four primaries was a rich harvest of 415 delegates-including 271 in California, 109 in New Jersey, 18 in New Mexico and 17 in South Dakota.

California's was the largest winner-take-all block in the nation, representing 18 per cent of those needed to nominate President Nixon's opponent at the Democratic national convention in Miami Beach.

Going into Tuesday's primaries, the UPI delegate count showed McGovern with 560.75, Humphrey with 307.35 and Wallace with 308.

"This is the first time in American history that any candidate will have won four primaries in one day," a confident McGovern told wealthy contributors as he awaited the California returns.

Top Humphrey aides said late on election day that the percentage of the former vice president's defeat would determine whether he would give up his 12-year quest for the presidency. They said if Humphrey lost by as much as 20 percentage points—as predicted by the Field California Poll—he would withdraw and free his delegates.

Angelo Geocaris, the Illinois campaign chairman for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, also said the Maine Democrat might withdraw completely in the face of a strong California showing by McGovern.

Wallace, paralyzed from the waste down by the bullet of a would-be assassin, was an absentee write-in candidate who threatened to take California votes from both McGovern and Humphrey and delay ballot counting even without the San Francisco federal court order.

The polls in California were scheduled to close at 8 p.m. PDT but the court order was issued after the federal judge heard arguments that people in San Francisco were waiting as long as two hours to get into the voting booths.

The delay was brought about by the consolidation of precincts in San Francisco and the length of the ballot with scores of state, county and local candidates and various propositions.

President Nixon was assured of sewing up enough delegates to be renominated for a second term. The President entered Tuesday's primaries with 633 delegates and was regarded as a shoo-in to win California's 96. The Republican nomination requires 274 delegates.

Judge extends voting time throughout San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A federal judge Tuesday ordered San Francisco polling places open an extra three hours because of the consolidation of precincts and the length of the ballot.

U.S. District Court Judge George B. Harris issued a temporary restraining order to keep the polls open until 11 p.m. PDT. (2 a.m. EDT).

The action was sought by Agar Jaicks, chairman of the city's Democratic Central Committee, and nine other Democrats.

Their attorney, Frederick Furth, said that because of the consolidation of polling places and an extraordinarily lengthy ballot, many voters were required to wait more than two hours early in the day before punching their machines.

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. earlier requested the television networks not to announce their projected results until the polls closed at 8 p.m. PDT. At least one network agreed.

The television public had expected to hear the results on special radio and television programs beginning at 8:30 p.m. PDT.

Furth maintained that as a mechanical matter there was only time for one-third of San Francisco's 368,000 registered voters to cast ballots between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m.—the regular hours.

He warned that about 130,000 would try to vote between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. if past patterns prevailed.

But Emmery Mihaly, the city's registrar of voters, insisted that spot checks showed voting was running only about two per cent behind which might have been expected. He added the congestion was partly caused by the length and clumsiness of the ballot requiring the use by each voter of two voting machines.

Within minutes after Harris' order, campaign workers for Sen. George McGovern fanned out throughout the city to deliver copies to the 771 precincts.

Mihaly also ordered police to help distribute the order.

The judge's decision was similar to one issued earlier this year in Cleveland, Ohio.

The San Francisco situation was considered previously by a Superior Court and the state Supreme Court but both tribunals rejected petitions for longer voting hours.

Communist troops run out of Kontum after long siege

SAIGON (UPI) —U.S. B52 bombers blasted Communist forces retreating from Kontum city in the Central Highlands Tuesday and early today after South Vietnamese troops drove the last remnants of a North Vietnamese commando team out of the provincial capital, military spokesmen said.

Allied forces had fought the Communists for 12 days before rooting them out of Kontum, 260 miles north of Saigon, and sending the last holdouts scurrying to the hills.

The command spokesman said the total of 22 B52 missions flown inside South Vietnam in the 18-hour period ending at dawn today included 13 around Kontum and five near Quang Tri city, 18 miles south of the demilitarized zone (DMZ) and capital of the country's northernmost province, which was seized in the wake of the Communist offensive that began March 30.

Two B52 strikes were made 15 miles and about 20 miles south of the ancient imperial capital of Hue and two were flown three miles west of the besieged province capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

Government relief forces three miles southwest of the devastated town reported killing 18 communists Tuesday.

Another South Vietnamese relief force two miles south of An Loc was shelled by Communist artillery fire Tuesday and clashed with North Vietnamese forces, killing 31. One South Vietnamese was killed and 64 wounded in the incident.

In other developments:

—U.S. warplanes reported destroying 110 Communist bunkers and foxholes around Phu My, a district (county) capital in Binh Dinh province along the central coast 280 miles north of Saigon. South Vietnamese ground troops drove the Communists out of the town one day earlier.

—North Vietnamese troops shot down two American helicopters near Phu My, wounding four Americans.

—Radio Hanoi said Communist gunners shot down two American fighter-bombers over North Vietnam. The U.S. command refused comment.

—At An Loc, the battered provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon, South Vietnamese spokesmen reported Communists lobbed 289 rocket, mortar and artillery rounds into the city —one of the lightest shellings since the siege started in early April.

Over 450 miners trapped in Rhodesia's largest mine

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) —Rescue workers brought up the first bodies and one survivor Tuesday night after fighting clouds of smoke and poisonous gas deep inside Rhodesia's major coal mine. More than 450 other miners still were trapped 200 to 600 feet down.

A mine spokesman said three bodies were brought up in the evening. They were all believed to be African, sources said. The survivor also was believed a black.

Officials said 468 men —435 Africans and 33 whites — were believed trapped by an explosion which shook the Wankie mine, located near the Wankie Game Reserve and Victoria Falls 500 miles west of Salisbury.

Rescue workers wearing liquid oxygen backpacks edged through the smoke and gas choked tunnels but their party was blocked by rockfalls and debris.

Rhodesia's minister of mines, Ian Dillon, flew to the scene and extra rescue equipment was sent to the site.

Outside the mine, more than 1,000 relatives and friends stood by waiting for the rescuers' report. Some wept while others stood silent and expressionless.

The blast occurred at 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT) when work crews were operating at full strength. The dull boom rattled windows a mile away.

Soon after the explosion, clouds of lethal methane gas spread through the tunnels. The gas could not be pumped out because the extractor fans were damaged in the explosion.

Wankie is a major coal supplier for both Rhodesia and neighboring Zambia. It is owned by the Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa and employs almost 5,000 miners, most of them Africans. The mine produces 2.2 million tons of coal a year.

Shrill horns blasted the news of the disaster soon after the explosion but most relatives felt the blast and were already on the way to the shaft.

New rescue equipment was installed recently, including special suits and oxygen masks. Mine officials made an urgent call for extra supplies of liquid oxygen.

Rhodesian Air Force planes carried emergency cannisters of oxygen and special rescue personnel to the area.

The cause of the blast was not immediately determined.

California voters line up to cast ballots.

Sweden criticizes U.S.

STOCKHOLM — Charges of "ecological warfare" were hurled against the U.S. by Swedish Premier Palme at the UN environment conference in Stockholm. He told delegates from 112 nations: "The immense destruction brought about by indiscriminate bombing, by large-scale use of bulldozers and herbicides is an outrage . . . which requires urgent international attention." In Washington, the state department said it was "deeply disturbed" that Palme had introduced "extraneous matter" at the session. (Details on page 5.)

State won't extend sale time

HARRISBURG — The House Tuesday defeated legislation which would have permitted Sunday liquor sales in hotels and restaurants up to midnight. It was defeated 39-143. The bill also said that no club licensee could sell between 4 a.m. and 7 a.m. on any day and that no public service licensee could sell liquor between 2 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Lansky indicted

WASHINGTON — Meyer Lansky, reputedly one of America's most powerful organized crime leaders, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami Tuesday on charges of conspiring to evade federal income taxes on money received from gamblers on junkets to a London gambling club. Lansky and Dino Cellini, a long-time associate and a stockholder and employe of George Raft's Colony sporting Club in London, also were charged with conspiring to obstruct the Internal Revenue Service IRS in assessing their income taxes. And Cellini was charged with filing two false income tax returns.

Insurance rates drop

BOSTON — The combination of a no-fault insurance law, a tough-minded state insurance commissioner and the Massachusetts Supreme Court has slashed compulsory automobile insurance rates by 70.2 per cent in two years. The huge cut was completed Monday when the court upheld a second 27.6 per cent decrease in compulsory rates for 1972, which will produce between $30 and $40 million in rebates within a month. Because of the court's decision, the cost of compulsory auto insurance in Boston will drop from a high of $117 a year in 1970 to $47 a year after the rebates have been distributed.

The state's auto insurance industry is in a state of confusion and anger.

31 oppose tax reform delay

WASHINGTON — Thirty-one House members introduced legislation Tuesday intended to force Congress to overhaul the nation's tax laws now—not next year as proposed by President Nixon. The 24 Democrats and seven Republicans sponsored a bill that would eliminate 54 individual and business tax deductions in three stages by January 1974. As originally proposed by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, the idea is to repeal all the major exemptions as a way of forcing Congress to examine them. Under the plan, lawmakers would have to specifically vote for an exemption to keep it on the law books.

Legislature may ignore report

Abortion panel divided on revisions

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Two contrasting reports on Pennsylvania's abortion law are ready for inspection by Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

One calls for complete legalization of abortion, and the other says the current restricted law should be maintained.

The two sets of recommendations came from the Pennsylvania Abortion Law Commission, an all-woman group appointed by the governor to study the state's 112-year-old law.

The women voted 15-8 in favor of liberalizing the law by permitting any woman to receive an abortion in the first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

But it appeared that the recommendations would be ignored by the legislature. The House Health and Welfare Committee, which is holding two abortion bills, refused Tuesday to release them for open debate.

The committee decision was against the requests of Democratic leaders who wanted the bills — one to prohibit all abortions and the other to legalize all of them — brought up for a vote.

Leak information

The 23-member abortion commission met Monday to finalize its recommendations. The governor had asked the women to keep the findings private until after he had reviewed the reports, but members from both sides leaked information to the news media.

According to the majority report, abortions would be permitted "within the first 20 weeks of pregnancy in the best judgment of the physician, or later only after medical consultation when it is in the best medical interests of the patient."

The second section of the statement generally was interpreted to mean the majority members would favor legalized abortion all the way up to the time of birth.

"If it were not for the state's conviction that it must regulate in this area," the report said, "there is no rational basis for any time limit. We see no legal basis for giving a woman a contingent right — contingent upon what week of pregnancy she is in."

Extend time limit

The majority members first agreed on an 18-week time limit but extended it to 20 weeks at the final session. In comparison, New York's time limit is 24 weeks, California's is 20 weeks, and England's is 28 weeks.

The majority report said abortions should be permitted "only in a medical facility approved for those purposes by the appropriate governmental agency and the Medical Practices Act."

Gas chamber recommended

House panel favors death penalty

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The House State Government Committee reporting on its series of hearings on capital punishment, said Tuesday it overwhelmingly favors the death penalty.

The report recommended immediate passage of a pending bill which would install a gas chamber at the state prison at Rockview, Centre County.

"The committee concluded that the most important issue in discussing the death penalty was "the removal of the convicted first degree murderer from society, so its citizenry can be protected," the report said.

"The removal of the convicted murderer from society may be done by one of two methods — imprisonment for life or imposition of the death penalty ... Life imprisonment has been shown not to be a foolproof method, because of incidents occurring within the confines of penal institutions by sentenced murderers.

"The committee finds it satisfactorily conclusive to favor the position of the death penalty as a necessity to effect elementary justice."

The report rejected requests by pro-death penalty forced for a voter referendum.

"The proposal of a public referendum is not a matter for the proponents to consider," it said. "This issue has already been satisfied by the people in that their elected representatives who represent the people have legislated this matter in presently existing law."

The committee was particularly critical of Gov. Milton J. Shapp for his stand against capital punishment. The governor has said he will permit no executions to take place in Pennsylvania as long as he is in office.

The committee said current laws ought to be changed to remove the governor's authority to issue the death warrant and give it to the trial judge.

Charge labeled as one-sided, unbalanced

U.S. accused of waging ecological warfare

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme, host to the First United Nations Conference on the Environment, indirectly accused the United States Tuesday of waging "ecological warfare" in Southeast Asia.

A U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington labeled the charge "one-sided and unbalanced" and said the war was "extraneous" to the conference.

The clash came in the second day of the meeting as the United States won general support for President Nixon's proposed international environment fund. The United States pledged $40 million toward an initial five-year funding of $100 million, Japan $10 million and Britain and Canada unspecified amounts.

Palme did not mention the United States by name but his target was clear when he said, "The immense destruction brought about by indiscriminate bombing, by large scale use of bulldozers and herbicides is an outrage sometimes described as ecocide, which requires urgent international attention."

The prime minister confirmed later in a radio interview he was speaking of the Vietnam War. Sweden, which has allotted $45 million in reconstruction aid to North Vietnam, has leveled similar accusations against the United States at Red Cross meetings in Geneva.

"It is shocking that only preliminary discussions of this matter have been possible so far in the United Nations and at the Conferences of the International Committee of the Red Cross, where it has been taken up by my country and others," he said.

"We fear that the active use of these methods is coupled by a passive resistance to discuss them," Palme said. "It is of paramount importance that ecological warfare cease immediately."

Palme said later the Swedish delegation would make no further attempt to inject the Vietnam issue into the conference.

The U.S. State Department responded with an unusually prompt and direct statement saying the United States was "deeply disturbed that the Swedish minister should interject this matter which we consider extraneous to the conference in his speech today."

The statement, issued by State Department spokesman Charles Bray in Washington, called Palme's description of U.S. actions in Vietnam "as one-sided and unbalanced as his earlier interventions have been" and said the United States found it "incomprehensible that a head of government of the host state should have spoken as he did."

The proposal for an environment fund to fight pollution and guard the world's natural resources still must be formally adopted by the conference and then requires approval of the U.N. General Assembly where the Soviet bloc will have to take a stand.

Senate ready to vote today on Kleindienst nomination

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate agreed Tuesday to vote at 4 p.m. EDT Thursday on Richard G. Kleindienst's nomination to be attorney general, ending the longest investigation of a presidential appointee in history.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield announced the agreement and won unanimous consent for the plan after two days of intense backroom negotiations with opponents of Kleindienst's selection to succeed John N. Mitchell.

Under the plan worked out by the leaders and the opponents, there will be two votes on the nomination. The first will be on a motion to send the nomination back to the Judiciary Committee for further study. If this were approved it would be tantamount to killing the appointment.

If that vote fails —as anticipated —a vote would then follow immediately on the nomination itself. Informal surveys indicated that Kleindienst probably will win confirmation with ease, with no more than 20 to 25 votes against him.

Kleindienst, 48, is a former Arizona lawyer who was a key figure in Sen. Barry M. Goldwater's 1964 presidential campaign. He also was active in Richard M. Nixon's 1968 campaign.

The Judiciary Committee originally approved his nomination unanimously on Feb. 29 after two days of hearings. But at Kleindienst's request, it reopened its hearings after charges surfaced that he was involved in settlement of an federal antitrust suit after the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. pledged $400,000 to underwrite the Republican National Convention this summer.

What followed was a running controversy. It sparked more than two months of additional committee hearings and a week of formal floor debate. In the meantime, the convention was moved from San Diego to Miami Beach.

On April 27, the committee again voted on Kleindienst's nomination and it was again approved, this time by a vote of 11 to 4.

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., announced his opposition to Kleindienst after the agreement to vote was announced.

Governors don't believe McGovern can win election

HOUSTON (UPI)—Most of the nation's Democratic governors—putting party politics ahead of official business—said Tuesday they don't believe George McGovern can be elected president, despite his showing in the California primary.

Democratic chief executives attending the National Governors Conference met with McGovern into the early morning hours Tuesday but those who opposed the South Dakota senator most strongly said he had done little to convince them he can defeat President Nixon.

"A great number of governors are still not ready to go to Sen. McGovern," said Gov. Kenneth Curtis of Maine, who supports Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine. "They would still like to see Muskie get the nomination because they believe he can defeat Nixon."

"I personally don't believe that he's reaching the average voter," said Gov. William Waller of Mississippi. "There's a taxpayer revolt in this nation and he's on the opposite side of the every day taxpayer. The idealism of his campaign is what's killing him."

Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana, who had to stay home in Baton Rouge while the state legislature met, said he opposes McGovern because "I don't think this is the day and age for fringe candidates." "If McGovern does get the nomination it's going to be a Goldwater nomination in reverse," Edwards said.

Power to desegregate stripped from commission

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to strip the Human Relations Commission of its power to order racially imbalanced school districts to desegregate.

The vote was 96-93 on an amendment to a bill which outlines the procedures which the commission must follow when investigating racial discrimination. The bill was placed in position for a final vote today.

According to the amendment, sponsored by Rep. Charles N. Caputo, D-Allegheny, the HRC could investigate the schools and recommend a plan of desegregation but it would have no authority to enforce that plan.

House Majority Leader Rep. K. Leroy Irvis, a black legislator from Pittsburgh, said the measure "would return the Human Relations Commission to the toothless condition it had as the Fair Employment Practices Commission back in 1949.

"It is distressful to me to find us reaching backwards rather than looking forward."

But Caputo responded: "If I have to chose between a toothless body and one with tiger's teeth, I'll chose the toothless body."

Caputo said the commission had overstepped its power in the past by ordering desegregation which forced children to be bused away from their neighborhood schools.

Rep. Robert J. Butera, R-Montgomery, said Caputo's amendment would simply take school desegregation out of state control and place it in the hands of the courts.

"If we eliminate the Human Relations Commission from this field," Butera said, "it is going to be replaced by the courts, either federal or state. This problem is not going to go away merely by our saying it doesn't exist."

The House passed another anti - busing bill last month which would prohibit the busing of any child without parental consent. Both bills were considered reactions to recent desegregation orders filled by the commission.

Election residency changed

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Senate Tuesday passed legislation reducing the residency requirement for federal, state and local primary and general elections to 30 days.

The unanimous vote on the legislation followed a recent U. S. Supreme Court decision which suggested that residency requirements should be no longer than 30 days.

The legislation, which was sent to the House where quick approval is expected, requires county voter registration books to remain open until 30 days prior to an election. The old deadline was 50 days.

It also reduces the old 90-day residency requirement for state, local and federal elections to 30 days.

Permanent lottery tickets

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Beginning today, the New Jersey Lottery will be selling "permanent" tickets that are good for up to one year.

Termed the "Clover Club" by lottery officials, the plan allows purchasers to buy one ticket, whose number will be good for 14, 24, or 52 weeks, depending on how much is paid for the ducket.

The number will be registered in the purchaser's name at lottery headquarters, and the winners will be notified.

Pentagon reveals new missile plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Pentagon disclosed plans Tuesday to develop an entirely new submarine - launched nuclear missile as a "hedge" against failure in the second round of U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the Long Range Cruise Missile would be launched from a submarine and flown like an airplane to its target at altitudes below 500 feet to avoid radar detection.

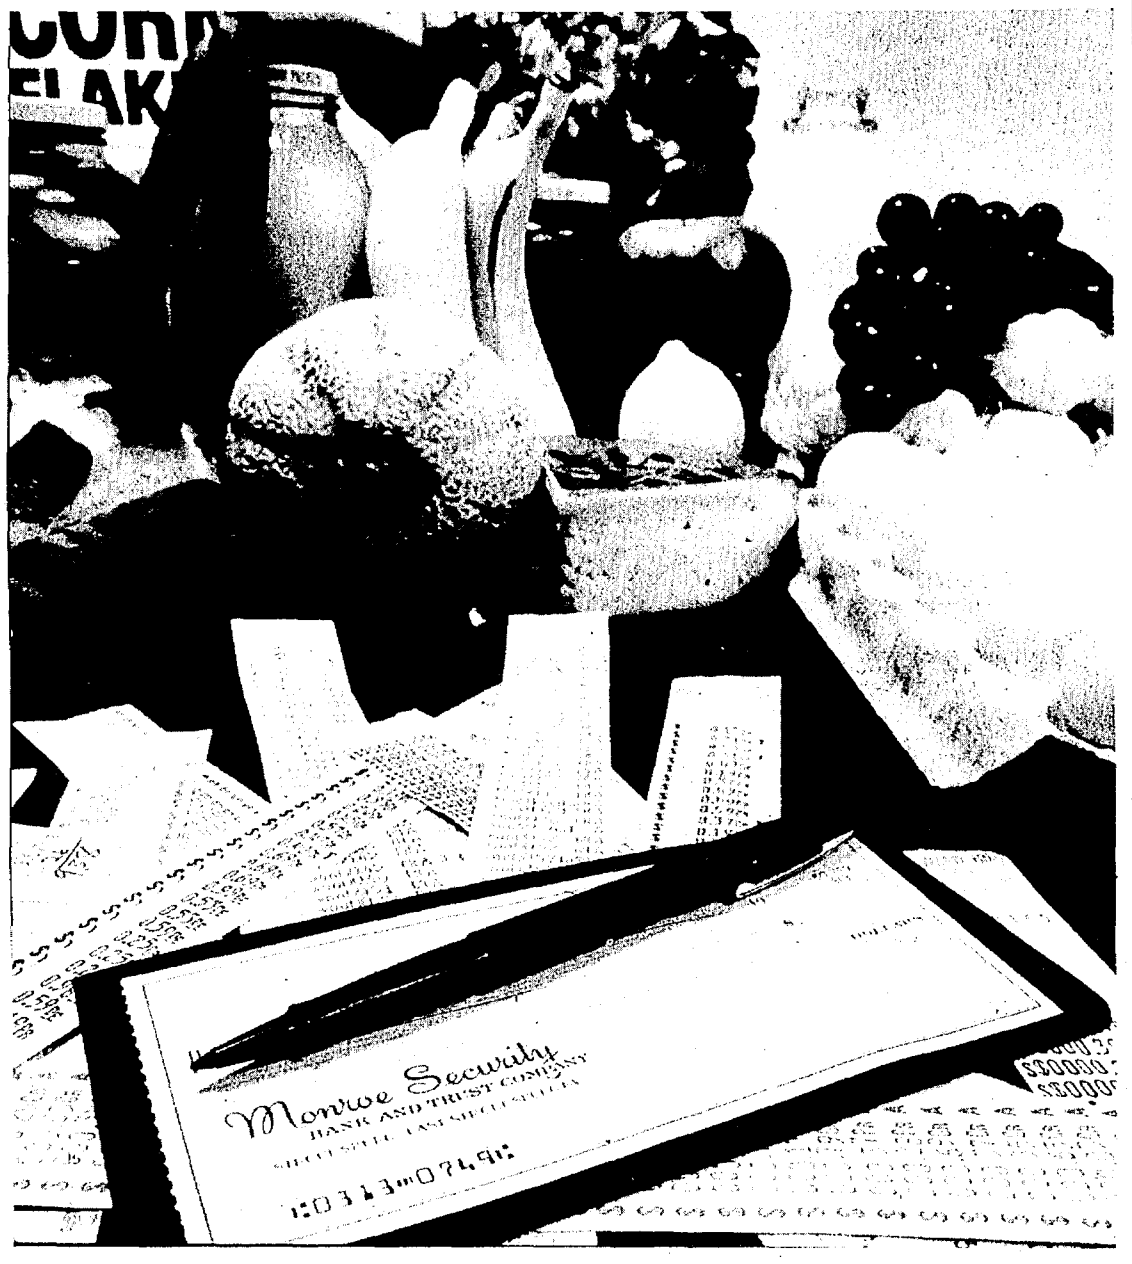

Friedheim said the cruise missile, a category of weapons not covered by the five-year offensive arm limitation agreements signed in Moscow, could not be ready for operational deployment before the late 1970s. The Pentagon is asking $40 million in the fiscal year starting July for its development.

The Defense Department has been working on cruise missiles since 1969, but has always described them as anti-ship weapons carrying conventional warheads. The Soviet Union already has more than 60 submarines carrying more than 360 anti-shipping cruise missiles.

But in testimony before Congress Monday, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird listed a $20 million increase in cruise missile funds for fiscal year 1973 among several requested "SALT-related adjustments to strategic programs" in the Defense Department budget.

Asked why Laird has included the cruise missile among America's strategic nuclear programs, Friedheim told a news briefing Tuesday that the weapon "could have strategic uses."

"Obviously it would be several years down the road," Friedheim said. "We have asked for a number of hedges on the offensive weapon side as the talks go on."

Hints on flower growing

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles that will be run throughout the summer on preparing for the West End Fair.

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

GILBERT — For a glorious finish in the flower category at the West End Fair this year, make a good start now.

This was the advice of fair prize winner Mrs. Wilma Hinton, who offers here some advice for raising annuals, bulbs and roses.

Now is the time to plant annual flowers, according to Mrs. Hinton, because the danger of frost is over.

Since most annuals are grown in flats, the Gilbert Housewife warned that roots are often tangled and intermingled. She advised breaking out these plants and said cutting them apart could damage roots.

The next step in planting annuals is to make holes in the soil with a trowl, so that the new plants are set slightly deeper in the soil than they were in the flat.

Put the plant in the hole and bring soil around it. Press down gently to firm it in the ground. The plant roots should be watered good and a cup of plant fertilizer should be put on the ground over the roots.

"All the flowers or buds should be pinched off," said Mrs. Hinton, "so the flower gets full. When you plant annuals and even when you plant perennials, pinching out tips will cause plants to branch out."

Pinching off buds, according to the Gilbert housewife, is especially good for petunias, marigolds, zinnias, marguerites, and geraniums.

First step

Mrs. Hinton emphasized that the most important first step in gardening is creating and maintaining good soil. Soil should be tested periodically, mulch should be added to keep the ground loose and to maintain moisture, and fertilizer should be added regularly.

After a short dry spell, Mrs. Wilma Hinton waters some purple Flags in her large flower bed in Gilbert to make sure they "have enough to drink." Mrs. Hinton, a long-time prize winner at the West End Fair, said flowers must always have enough water, especially in the early summer when they are first taking hold.

Flowers always need water; in dry periods, it is especially important to sprinkle them regularly.

With bulbs, which are planted anywhere from one to eleven inches deep, Mrs. Hinton suggested that the top half of the soil be excavated first. Then mulch should be worked in along with some fertilizer. Bulbs should be planted at their proper depth and covered with soil.

Begonias and irises are planted one inch deep. Calla and root peony at two inches and crocus and anemone at three inches.

At four inches, ranunculers, scilla and muscari should be planted and bulb iris and canna at about five inches.

Planted between the six and seven inch level are tulips, gladiolas and snowflakes. Daffodils, lillys and narcissus are planted between nine and eleven inches.

"When you plant annual flowers in the same bed where you have bulbs, mark the bulbs with stones and plant the other flowers in between," said Mrs. Hinton. "After the bulbs have bloomed, the dry, yellow leaves should be tucked under the annuals and the plants should still be watered regularly."

Roses are difficult

The flower gardener also emphasized that some bulb plants such as gladiolas should be planted at different intervals throughout the summer, so when the fair arrives, the resident will have enough flowers at the proper maturity to enter in each category.

Roses, according to Mrs. Hinton are one of the most difficult flowers to grow and they need constant care.

"The thing to remember," she said, "is that roses want to grow, and you have to give them water and food, protect the leaves, and cut the flowers properly. If you take care of the bush, new flowers will appear every five or six weeks."

New rose bushes should be kept moist with peat moss until ready to plant. Tops should be pruned to an outside bud, six to eight inches above the bud union. Roots should be pruned to 12 inches.

Holes should be dug about 14 or 16 inches deep and 12 inches wide. The roots of the rose should be spread out over a small mound of dirt and mulch in the base of the hole. A soil mix should be used to fill in and the plant should be watered thoroughly.

A plant grower should be applied and at least three inches of mulch should be put on top of the roots to hold in moisture for the bush.

When the plants have an inch of new growth, plant food should be worked into the soil. This will provide internal protection from leafhoppers, thrips, mites and aphids.

Roses should be sprayed about once every six weeks.

"If you cut off old roses when the petals start to fall off," said Mrs. Hinton, "you keep the plant from going to seed. The next blooms will then get all the strength from the plant."

According to Mrs. Hinton, although flowers demand a lot of care in the beginning of the summer, especially in June, they usually take care of themselves in the latter part of the season.

"If you want to win in the flower category at the fair this year, now is the time to put the effort into your garden," she said.

Scouts clean up town

Mount Pocono Bureau

MOUNT POCONO — Visitors to the Mount Pocono area were eating dust and enjoying it recently as Mount Pocono Cadette Girl Scout Troop 338 and their leaders swept up the business district of Mount Pocono.

The girl scouts were assisted by Mount Pocono Boy Scout Troop 96.

Pictures were snapped by visitors as the hard working group pushed brooms along Main Street in their annual Clean and Sweep project.

Curious visitors wanted to know what was going on as they side-stepped the brooms. When answered, comments such as "great," "Wow," "look at that gal swing that broom," "What a way to keep the town clean," "They sure must be proud of their town," and "Sure don't see this in our town," were heard.

Not only were pictures being taken of the workers, but the hand-painted litter cans placed along the side-walks were subjects for many cameras.

The group had worked many hours cleaning and hand painting these litter cans with names of local business people.

One that seemed to attract much attention was gaily painted with a police car and printed with "Keep Our Beat Neat."

Participating in the clean-up were Leaders Muriel Peterson and Marilyn Latzo; Cadettes Donna Kinsley, Ruth Hay, Susan Murray, Lynn Reiz, Amy Hutchinson, Patricia Sauter, Shelly Planchock and Joy Fredmund.

Assisting were Clubmaster Ivan Roe and Scouts Jim Fredmund, Andy Shordinski and Emmanuel Salak, Jr.

Portland council concerned

Property abuse discussed

PORTLAND — The condition of borough properties came under heavy consideration in regard to its possible abuse at a Monday night meeting of the Portland Borough Council.

The subject of junk cars and their possible fate was discussed at length, with each councilman seeking to define just what a junk car was and what the borough could do about the situation.

Councilman Kenneth Rutt made a motion, which was unanimously passed, to send letters to the owners of these vehicles advising them that they were in violation of a borough ordinance and would be fined up to $50 if the cars were not removed.

Council Vice President Neil Brodti then brought up the condition of the borough's baseball field, which, he said was suffering from the presence of minibikes and motorcycles being driven across the field during the evening hours.

A motion was passed directing that signs be posted to warn drivers of these vehicles of the illegality of their being driven in the area composed of the baseball field, school yard and playground.

Brodti had warned council that the borough was liable for injuries occurring at these areas and said that insurance would have to be increased if such traffic was not eliminated.

Council also moved to have Walter Davidge sign a release which would eliminate borough responsibility in the results of his work on building a retaining wall on property adjacent to borough property.

Mr. Davidge had received permission from the borough to plant vegetation on a 10-to-15 foot area of his property which runs into borough property. Damage from recent rains has resulted in part of the soil being washed away, thus resulting in the need to build the wall to retain the soil. The release would eliminate borough responsibility in case the wall collapses and it is binding in case of property changes.

Councilman Dutt made a motion that the borough advertise for bids to install a gas chlorinator in the borough. He estimated the bids would run between "$3,500 and $4,000." The borough engineer was advised to seek bids.

In other action, Council:

— Suggested that water drainage ditches be built at the intersection of Collins Avenue and Bruce Street to eliminate water drainage onto properties along Main Street near the intersection.

— Passed a motion to repair all bad water valves in the Borough.

— Accepted a suggestion from Councilman Dutt that the borough health officer be reminded that it is his job to deal with rodent problems, not council's. A possible salary increase as an enticement was mentioned.

— Allotted $300 for improvements in the form of new fencing at the baseball field.

— Granted Fire Department officials permission to move the borough's fire siren from the school to the Fire House.

— Heard a complaint from Louis Steele, Hester Street, that his cable television hookup was giving off sparks, suggesting that the facility lacked sufficient ground mechanisms to eliminate the dangers of lightning. Councilman Fred Honnecker suggested that Council ask Metropolitan-Edison to investigate the possibility of wiring difficulties before contacting Omega Cable Television, the borough's source of cable television.

— Adopted a resolution to comply with the Pennsylvania Sewage Laws on sewage installation, with work not to be done until Tocks Island work is completed.

— Adopted a resolution allowing Commonwealth Telephone Company to begin service in the borough, on the condition that company actions don't impair borough functions.

— Took under consideration the use of companies for garbage collections in the borough. Council decided to advertise for bids on the service, which would involve year-round collections twice a week.

Cable television service changes hands in Milford

MILFORD — It was announced at the Milford Borough Council meeting Monday night that Pencore Services Inc., of Palmerton, had purchased the community television cable company which services the borough.

Claude Reinhard, president of Pencore, who attended the council meeting, said his company planned to add several new channels and local programming to the services that will be offered cable customers.

He also stated that the company hoped to expand their facilities into building development areas in Pike County.

Council requested its solicitor to prepare the necessary legal documents to bring the new company in compliance with Ordinance No. 162, which prescribes the guidelines for the operation of a television cable in the borough.

Mayor Donald Howe reported Police Officer John Mulholland had resigned due to illness in his wife's family. The officer had been called to the Midwest to take over a business operation.

A newly constructed fence was ordered removed from borough property on James Street. President Merritt Quinn said no new infringements on streets and alleys or other borough property would be tolerated.

Quinn reported the borough solicitor had written the Public Utility Commission to request a local hearing in regard to an increase in electric rates being asked by the Pike County Light and Power Co.

David Fisher, president of the Milford Taxpayers League, told acting solicitor Robert Sigal if petitions were prepared protesting the increase, members of the league would circulate them for signatures.

Atty. Sigal told council he believed they might be able to recover tax money under Section 460-6 of Public Law 89-58, which created the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

He said, however, he expected court action might be necessary in order for such reimbursement to be made.

Borough residents were informed the ordinance requiring that weeds be cut on vacant lots will again be enforced. Cutting will take place this month.

Budget cut circus time

The two-party system should be at its best during budget-approval time. Here is where a "loyal opposition" can make its presence felt and justify its existence by taking an appropriately jaundiced look at the money requested by the party in power and work for judicious cuts in the inevitable fattened programs supported by the administration.

But somehow, we don't have much confidence in the Pennsylvania legislature's ability to do that. In this state, with its anachronistic load of spoils system vestiges, legislation seems to revolve too often around what deals a legislator can make and what price he can command for his vote.

While there is always a tinge of partisanship around budget time, that's only to be expected and, in fact, encouraged in most instances. After all, the opposition party's members were voted into office on the promise of doing battle against many of the programs espoused by the majority party. They would be derelict in their duty if they failed to take up the cudgels.

But in our experience (when there has been a budget at all) it not only hasn't shrunk much after running the legislative gauntlet, but in some cases has grown. And worse yet, all too often programs of critical importance to the state have been whittled down in order to make fiscal room for the favorite pork-barrel programs of some legislators who are able to command a sufficiently high price for their support of some segment or other of the administration's budget.

Rep. Harry Englehart, D-Cambria, snorted at promises by House Minority Leader Rep. Kenneth B. Lee of Sullivan County to pare the budget down and asked, "Where's it going to come from?" His point was that many of the programs contained in the budget — ranging from meat inspection to tourist promotion, school subsidies to aid to the blind — are necessary and mandated. Where do you cut, and how much?

Well, we've never believed that every state agency should get everything it asks for. In our short service with the government, we learned that the game was to ask for at least half again as much as you wanted, hoping to get three-quarters of what you could get by with. There is always room for cuts.

But what we're concerned with is that many of those cuts will receive maximum publicity (it is an election year, after all) while the pork-barrel projects that will take up the slack won't be mentioned at all. In effect, we could well wind up with a budget nearly as large as that asked by Gov. Shapp, but not have anywhere near the complete programs he promised — promises, incidentally, that got him elected to office.

The Pennsylvania Story

Tax proposal

HARRISBURG — As if the Legislative Democrats, in the running-the-show majority they are, don't have enough headaches to contend with this election year, another headbanger is coming down the Harrisburg pike in the form of a graduated income tax proposal.

To coin a phrase, the first letters of this proposal form the word, "GIT".

Now it will be a question as to whether the Democrats "git" the Republicans on this issue or vice-versa.

If the recent primary election can be considered a straw in the wind (no Republican incumbents were defeated; several Democrats were) then the coming general election could stir up an even bigger breeze for the donkey-riders.

"Gitting" back to the issue at hand, the Democrats who rule the Capitol Hill roost, including the Governor's Office, will have to decide if they want to trek into this potential wind tunnel.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who has the honor and glory of fathering Pennsylvania's first ever state income tax, wants it abolished — providing it can be replaced with a "GIT" (or graduated income tax).

Hence his advocacy of House Bill 1 which would give the voters an opportunity to remove the Constitutional barrier against a graduated income tax — or keep it cemented in the law.

In advancing this thorny issue, His Excellency called for bipartisan support. He's getting everything except that.

GIT has stirred up more dust, cross-currents, under-currents and the like than any an issue in many a moon. And the storm clouds are thickening.

Because it is a proposed change to the Pennsylvania Constitution, House Bill 1 would have to be passed by two separately-elected Legislatures and then by the people in a referendum.

By this timetable the soonest the Constitutional change could take place would be next year's primary election.

To date, the bill has passed both chambers by easy margins which, on the surface, would indicate wide legislative acceptance of GIT. But it's the old story of the iceberg showing only its tip. There's plenty of ship-scuttling ice beneath the calm surface.

Voted for bill

Many Republicans actually voted for the bill simply to get the issue out into the open; particularly in this tinder-dry election year. Looking ahead, there is the gubernatorial election in 1974. Meanwhile, the bill is gathering dust in Legislative Conference Committee with no word yet as to when or even if it will emerge.

Battle lines over GIT, which at first were hazy, are now becoming more visible. The Governor and numerous other Democrats on Capitol Hill in both chambers support a graduated income tax. Minority Republicans are generally opposed.

Recently, the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce came out with a major "white paper" opposing House Bill 1 on grounds that it is too broad in scope and lacks clear outline as to what actual tax structure would be spawned under the new proposed authority.

Interestingly, however, the not-to-be-sneezed at League of Women Voters of Pennsylvania just last month came out in support of a graduated income tax. This should give Republicans pause since there are more voters on the female variety than the other.

Who brought problems?

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

No one seems to know exactly why the Pike County Commissioners are pulling out from the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council.

But the contention by minority Democratic Commissioner James Duffy that the board has been historically opposed to the Tocks Island Dam is a lot of bunk. History points to the contrary, from the time Pike County Commissioner Warner Depuy signed the TIRAC agreement June 1, 1965, to the completion of the small dry dams in Pike County.

Pike County officials were some of the few who immediately realized the need for flood protection, of course — to construct a series of dry dams in western Pike County. The late Jay Schroeder, whom Duffy succeeded on the board, had been a proponent of the project and, to our recollection, neither commissioners Depuy nor George Coutts have ever voiced open opposition.

We maintain that while Pike County has favored the project, the commissioners may have altered their stance because they are being forced to change.

The commissioners have historically rejected change and have been stubborn in accepting suggestions from TIRAC in solving their problems — because they had come to realize all this is going to cost them money, and spending money for the welfare of Pike County is against the commissioners' principles. The commissioners would rather have a very low tax rate and draw in very little money to maintain a shoe lace government and let the problems of the county be damned.

We remember in 1967 when Commissioners Depuy, Coutts and Schroeder explained their form of government. They explained they were administrators. But administrators of and for what? This is, we believe, is where the major reason lies for the commissioners pulling out of TIRAC.

In the eyes of the commissioners, TIRAC must have turned into a monster, forcing them to look at their problems: their lack of planning, their inefficient police protection, their illegal landfills and their wholly inadequate soil for accommodating septic tanks as a treatment for sewerage.

We believe the commissioners expected TIRAC to be a nice small little planning advisory group which would suggest changes. But TIRAC had moved beyond that step by trying to convince commissioners to bring about the change. It became annoying to the commissioners to be told — in a nice way — what can and should be done to solve the many problems facing the county. But there has been nothing but rejection from the county.

Depuy argues that no federal provisions have ben made for the eroding tax base, police protection, school systems, hospitals "and the rest of the human services you have to provide."

"The benefits to us in this area are nil. Also we feel the project encompasses the whole nation. Therefore, let the whole nation pay for it."

The reason is stupid. Depuy, as a former Pennsylvania Secretary of Revenue, should know better.

He maintains the tax base is eroding. As president of the Milford National Bank, he should know better. The market value of the county has grown at a phenomenal rate. As for the tax rate, it was the fault of the commissioners. The percentage of assessed valuation to market value was one of the lowest in the state — ranging down to nine per cent. The school district had realized this for years and finally took the commissioners to court and President Judge Arlington W. Williams ordered a reassessment of the county.

The commissioners are blaming all of their ills on the project. But they had better take a closer look at the scores of second home developments which have gobbled up two thirds of the land in the county. These developments provide a boon in real estate taxes, but they also provide problems: pollution, law enforcement, medical needs.

To the commissioners of Pike County, we would say the 20th century has caught up with them. It is not TIRAC nor Tocks to blame, but their own fortunate progress which is forcing them to do something about their problems.

Merry-go-round

Secret consumer bill edict

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Grim, grumpy Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., has issued secret orders to one of his subcommittees to hold up action on the consumer protection bill until after the Arkansas primaries.

The redoubtable, 76-year-old crimebuster is fihting for his political life against a 37-year-old challenger, Rep. David Pryor, D-Ark. The campaign will have its high noon on June 13 when the pair will meet in a primary run-off.

Meanwhile, McClellan doesn't want to alienate Arkansas' consumers by voting against consumer protection. But he also can't afford to upset the business interests that have supported him for the past 30 years.

The old man himself is a stockholder and director of Little Rock's largest bank, First National, and the 23-store Dillard department store chain.

Indeed, the president of Dillard's Arkansas division, Ray Hemp, acknowledge to my associate, Les Whitten, that McClellan was selected as a Dillard director in 1969 because of his "influence."

While McClellan has been campaigning in Arkansas, the consumer protection bill has been gathering dust in the Senate Executive Reorganization subcommittee. The bill has been pushed by consumer advocate Ralph Nader who is seeking to establish federal advocates within the government to battle forthe consumers.

On the House side, Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., got into a verbal slug-out with Nader over the bill, but a watered-down version finally passed the House in October. Now it is up to the Senate to act.

Big business lobbyists huddled secretly in Washington's fashionable Madison Hotel on April 14 to discuss how to sabotage the bill.

They didn't know that McClellan, as chairman of the parent Senate Government Operations Committee, had already ordered the subcommittee to hold up the bill until after the primaries.

Faced with this ultimatum, the subcommittee had no choice but to accede to his unusual demand.

Footnote: McClellan supported a weak version of the Nader bill in 1970 when there was no political heat on him from Arkansas.

Taxpayers and ITT

International Telephone and Telegraph, the embattled conglomerate, has been reassuring its stockholders not to worry about the seizure of its assets in Chile. The American taxpayers will make up most of the losses, ITT has promised soothigly.

This shouldn't surprise those who followed the Senate hearings on how ITT finagled an antitrust settlement from the Justice Department. But it has stunned the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, which ITT expects to pick up the tab for its Chilean losses.

OPIC, as it is called, is a federal agency which collects insurance premiums from private American corporations. The premiums go into a pool, which compensates firms whose assets are seized by foreign governments.

The trouble is that the American taxpayers will get stuck if the seizures exceed the premiums. The pool is now down to $115 million, because of President Salvador Allende's wholesale takeovers in Chile. Yet, in Chile alone, there are claims over $214 million against OPIC.

ITT, meanwhile, has notified its stockholders that OPIC will reimburse the conglomerate $89.6 million for the loss of its interests in the Chile Telephone Company. This is news to OPIC, which hasn't yet figured out what the telephone company is worth.

Yet, astonishingly, ITT's 1971 annual report lists the $89.6 million claim as a "current asset," insisting it is already receivable.

"We have no idea how they arrived at this figure or wy they put it in the annual report," a bewildered OPIC spokesman told us. "They certainly didn't consult us about doing it."

The telephone company, incidentally, was merely the first of the ITT seizures. Thus, the taxpayers may have to bail out the great conglomerate for its political bungling in Chile.

For most of its properties were seized in retaliation for ITT's abortive attempt to keep President Allende from taking office.

Messages from Hanoi

Intercepted messages between Moscow and Hanoi reveal that the North Vietnamese made urgent appeals to the Kremlin not to make any Vietnam deal in Moscow with President Nixon.

The secret messages from Hanoi warned that the United States was trying to divide Russia and China from their North Vietnam ally. The messages stressed that the President shouldn't be allowed to settle the Vietnam conflict with anyone but the North Vietnamese.

The Kremlin, in reply, gave its assurance to Hanoi that no deal would be made with Nixon regarding Vietnam. This may explain why the President could get no pledge from party chairman Leonid Brezhnev to help settle the Vietnam War. The most Brezhnev would do, apparently, was to promise he would encourage the North Vietnamese to negotiate a settlement.

Coin corner

Gold coins for you?

By ROBERT SVENSSON

The present lively interest in gold coins is based largely on the desire of an individual to protect himself against inflation. And, secondly, to make a little money if possible.

Investing in gold coins is tricky. It should not be considered without careful study. The price of gold coins is based on two factors: numismatic value, and the price of gold as a commodity. And the would-be investor should know a great deal about both.

Assuming he does, we can look at some of the gold coins currently available to prospective buyers.

The sovereign is one of the world's most commonly used gold coins. It is basically a British coin, but it has been minted by Canada, Australia, and other countries of the British Commonwealth.

Sovereigns most readily available for purchase are those of Great Britain, and the most common of these are the coins bearing the effigies of Queen Victoria, King Edward VII, King George VI, and Queen Elizabeth. Some of these coins are rare and qualify as collector's items. Most are common dates. The latter are valuable for two reasons; first, they are coins and are accorded respect because they are issued under the sovereignty of a great nation; second, because they are gold.

How much gold is in a sovereign?

For the would-be speculator or investor, this is a key question. A legitimate (and there are many, many counterfeits) British sovereign contains .2354 troy ounces of fine gold. On that figure you can determine its intrinsic value. This is the formula:

The United States has revalued gold to $38 an ounce. At this "controlled" price, the intrinsic value of the British sovereign in gold alone is $8.9452. In short, if melted down, it would yield slightly more than $8.94.

To this should be added its value as a coin. A fair estimate of this value would be about 25 to 30 per cent. This brings the sovereign to a base price of $11.50 more or less.

Goiter not hereditary

Both my mother and my sister have had goiters of the neck that necessitated surgery. Is this a hereditary condition? Can it ever be cancerous?

Miss J.P.M., Nev.

Dear Miss M.:

A goiter is an enlargement of the thyroid gland which lies in the lower portion of the neck.

The thyroid gland has a lobe on each side of the neck, joined together by a band of tissue known as the "isthmus." These enlargements of the thyroid gland are rarely ever malignant, or cancerous.

There is no hereditary basis for these enlargements. The reason they may occur in families has to do with geography. All members of a family drink the same water, which usually is deficinet in the chemical iodine.

Many inland areas in the United States and in Europe have such a deficiency, and consequently, the frequency of goiters is increased. For this reason iodized salt is increased in the diet. In some instances, iodine is added to reservoirs. When this scientific fact was established, the number of cases of goiter was markedly reduced.

In many instances, goiters are removed because they are cosmetically unattractive. Sometimes they interfere with the proper activity of the thyroid gland itself, and must therefore be removed.

There are now many exact studies of the blood, and tests with radioactive isotopes, that can determine the activity of the thyroid gland.

If you are concerned about your thyroid gland, and the possibility of acquiring a goiter in later life, you should have a complete checkup by your physician. This will give you the added assurance you need.

Is there any special vitamin that one takes to gain weight? I am 14 years old and skinny.

B.R.E., Maine

Dear B.:

Vitamin pills themselves do not have any calories that would help put on weight. Sometimes they do stimulate the appetite, and in this way could be responsible for gaining weight.

A nourishing balanced diet that is high in calories will, of course, help you put on weight.

Sometimes it is difficult for people to eat a great deal at one meal. If this is so with you, try to eat smaller meals at more frequent intervals.

A rich malted milkshake after school can furnish a tremendous number of calories. I am sure your mother knows many more high-caloric foods that will help remove you from the "skinny" class.

Does swelling of the ankles always mean kidney disease?

Mrs. G.W., Ont.

Dear Mrs. W.:

Swelling of the ankles is a sign that must not be overlooked. Yes, kidney disease can be one of the reasons, but there are many other causes that are far less important.

---

I have been told to stop biting the inside of my mouth because it might develop a cancer. I've done it for years, and there doesn't seem to be any problem.

Mrs. A. C. Conn.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Terrifying you is no way to get you to stop biting the inside of your mouth.

The fact that you have no ulceration in your mouth is at least a testimonial to the fact that you bite gently.

In some instances, biting can be injurious to the soft tissue of the mouth. Persistent injury can produce ulceration and changes in the underlying tissue that may be potentially dangerous.

It would be wise if you concentrated on breaking this habit.

100,000 protestors expected

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Protest leaders said Tuesday they expect more than 100,000 demonstrators here for the political conventions this summer and a spokesman for a "gay" organization said there would be a "kiss-in" during the Democratic gathering.

"Given the summer vacations from school and the way the country is going, I expect upwards of 100,000 demonstrators here for both conventions," said Stew Albert of the Youth International Party's Yippie faction.

Spokesmen for eight dissident groups forming a convention coalition coordinating committee agreed with Albert's estimate at a news conference here.

The meeting was called to announce the formation of the looseknit coalition of the Yippies, Zippies, the National Welfare Rights Organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Miami Conventions Coalition, the People's Party and the National Coalition of Gay Organizations.

Chuck Lamont, a spokesman for the gay group, said he expected 6,000 to 10,000 demonstrators at the convention who will stage the "kiss-in" if the Democrats do not adopt a plank in their platform giving homosexuals more rights.

"The city will call it lewd and lascivicious behavior, but the brothers and sisters will just be expressing their love for each other and for mankind," Lamont said.

Lamont said his group wanted a separate campsite from the other groups "because some of the demonstrators might have anti-gay feelings."

The other spokesmen agreed with Lamont's request for the 21st Street Beach and demanded three other campsites—two golf courses and a park.

Real Captain Marvel

The fellow striking the pose of comic book hero Captain Marvel is really Captain Marvel — Captain William Marvel of the U.S. Air Force to be exact. He donned the famed hero's costume which was made by stewardess friends Cathy Sherlock, left and Dori Grotelueschen. Marvel is stationed at Manhatten Beach, Calif.

O'Neill blasts Creamer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Police Commissioner Joseph F. O'Neill Tuesday accused state Attorney General J. Shane Creamer of "smear tactics" concerning a letter regarding alleged police corruption in the city.

O'Neill said Creamer "hindered a successful investigation" when he "improperly leaked" over the weekend to newspapers a letter to District Attorney Arlen Specter.

Creamer has denied leaking the letter which he sent to Specter outlining what he said were instances of police corruption in the city.

Mayor Frank L. Rizzo has called the letter a "double cross" and said Creamer should be fired by Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

O'Neill said Creamer owes "an immediate apology to the men and women of the Philadelphia Police Department, in that through his letter which he improperly leaked to the newspapers, he holds up to public ridicule every police officer in this city."

O'Neill said that in allegedly releasing the letter Creamer "has forwarned the persons allegedly involved and hindered a successful investigation."

GOP platform committee ready to fight McGovern

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Forecasting a Democratic document "loaded with false hopes and phony promises," the Republican platform committee chairman took dead aim at George McGovern Tuesday, promising a campaign based on programs that won't bankrupt the economy or endanger national security.

Rep. John J. Rhodes, R-Ariz., told a news conference that the South Dakota senator appeared assured of winning the Democratic presidential nomination.

"We know how that will affect the Democratic platform," he said. "It will be a document loaded with false hopes and phony promises. George McGovern just isn't the man to be president of this country."

Rhodes wrote off the current Democratic regional platform hearings around the country as a "traveling circus" aimed more at publicity than at testing public opinion.

As for the Republicans, he, said they were seeking the views of "truly representative" Americans by sending 60,000 questionnaires to educators, labor leaders, editors, senior citizens and others.

Rhodes said his 108-member platform committee would consider the poll's findings in Miami Beach Aug. 14-15-16 when it begins drafting the Republicans' policy statement before the national convention.

But as have many Republicans in the past few days, Rhodes left no doubt that the party was gearing up for a campaign against McGovern. Rhodes even quoted Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey to support his contention that McGovern was not the man for the job.

As to whether Republicans saw McGovern as the easiest Democrat for Nixon to beat, Rhodes said he wouldn't say that. He did say that in his opinion Sen. Edward M. Kennedy would give Nixon the toughest time.

Ford, Boggs to visit China for two weeks

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The two House leaders, Republican Gerald R. Ford and Democrat Hale Boggs, will leave June 23 for a two-week trip to China, they announced Tuesday.

They will travel by military jet, stopping over in Honolulu and Guam before landing in Shanghai June 26. their visit will also include Peking, Canton "and various rural areas." They will return by train from Canton to Hong Kong on July 4.

The invitation by the Chinese government was issued to the two House party leaders after House Speaker Carl Albert complained that the House should be included in any congressional trips to China. Senate leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott went there for three weeks on an invitation delivered during President Nixon's ice-breaking trip.

Consumers hit Denenberg for no-fault compromise

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A Philadelphia consumers organization said Tuesday Insurance Commissioner Herbert Denenberg ignored consumers when he drafted the so-called "compromise" no-fault auto insurance bill.

"The new bill is a concession to the insurance industry, a partial concession to the attorneys, but there are no concessions for the consumers," said the Rev. Robert Strommen, chairman of the Philadelphia Area Consumers Organization.

Strommen told a press conference a delegation of about 10 members of the coalition of 17 unions, churches and civic organizations came to the capital seeking action on a no-fault bill.

"The legislature has not dealt fairly with no-fault because not one of the bills introduced has come out of committee," Strommen said.

"We think the legislature has been irresponsible. Committee chairmen have not allowed the legislature to vote on these bills. Consumers have been betrayed by legislative inaction."

Strommen said that although he is a member of the Consumers Advisory Counsel of the Insurance Department and his group supported the original administration no-fault bill, Denenberg did not seek the group's views on the new bill introduced last week.

"I think he wants to get a bill passed with the title of no-fault and he sees the consumer as a group which is ineffective with the legislature," said Carl Dahlgren, secretary of the group.

Members of the group said they had not had a chance to study the new administration bill but from what they had read in the papers are opposed to it.

The original administration bill was considered a model of no-fault legislation and was by far the strongest proposed in the nation.

There was heavy opposition in both houses of the legislature, however, and realizing it would never leave committee, Denenberg agreed to a weaker bill.

Connally begins mission

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) —John B. Connally began his round-the-world, 15-nation journey on behalf of President Nixon Tuesday, arriving in Venezuela to discuss international economic matters and explain the significance of the Moscow summit on United States foreign policy.

Venezuelan officials surrounded Connally with strict security measures when his special U.S. Air Force plane arrived at 1:25 p.m. EDT at Maiquetia international airport on the Caribbean coast just north of Caracas.

Police guards stayed close to him, and a news conference later in the day was to be his only public appearance during his one-day meeting with officials.

Presidential press secretary Ron Ziegler said in Key Biscayne, Fla., Monday that Connally's mission would deal mostly with international economic problems.

Laird pushes for arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday he could not support the U.S-Soviet arms agreements if Congress failed to authorize the major new offensive weapons requested by the administration.

Laird told reporters following a closed session with the House Armed Services Committee that Congress would jeopardize "the security of the United States and the safety of our people" if it did not give the go-ahead to the $1 billion-a-copy Trident submarine, the B1 bomber and other offensive strategic systems.

The secretary had been asked by a reporter whether he would still favor ratification of the pacts resulting from the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) if Congress balked on pushing forward in those areas not restricted by the accords.

The Slim Gourmet

Supersalads

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Watching your weight? Why suffer through a skimpy sandwich when you can have a "supersalad" for lunch!

A Slim Gourmet supersalad is a whole meal in a bowl . . . all the meat or cheese you might normally pile on bread, plus lots and lots of crisp salad fixings.

Without the starchy bread your supersalad is lower in calories than a sandwich. But, more important than that, it's a lot more satisfying. A sandwich is too easy to eat: Five minutes and it's all gone! You spend the rest of your "lunch hour" foraging in the refrigerator for something to fill that imaginary empty spot.

A supersalad, on the other hand, takes no longer to make, but a lot longer to eat, so it's far more satisfying. Served up in a brimming bowl, it even looks like a lot! (I like to treat myself to a supersize supersalad served up in a quart-size Paul Revere bowl. How luxurious!)

SLIM GOURMET CHEF'S SALAD

(The "chef's salad" is a favorite in restaurants catering to the noontime executive lunch bunch. It's generally put together with deli-style ham, cheese and turkey. The result is calorie-conservative, until you add that restaurant-style dressing! For your make-it-at-home variety, use diet dressing.)

- 2 slices (2 ounces) processed Swiss or American cheese
- 2 ounces lean cooked (boiled) ham
- 2 ounces sliced white meat turkey roll
- 1 small head of lettuce (about 12 ounces)
- ½ cup sliced onions
- pinch of dried, crushed rosemary
- ½ teaspoon garlic salt
- pinch of pepper
- 4 tablespoons diet French dressing (or any preferred low-calorie salad dressing)

Trim fat from ham, if any. Slice the ham, cheese and turkey into strips, then into squares. Toss all ingredients together and serve immediately. Serves two, 221 calories each.

SLIM GOURMET HERO SALAD

(Here's an Italian hero sandwich, or "submarine" . . . without the Italian bread. To save calories, use domestic ham rather than Italian cold cuts; some of the latter are double the calories! For added flavor, sprinkle on a tablespoon of sausage-flavored soy bits, available in most supermarkets. They add a lot of flavor for only 30 calories!)

- 2 thick slices (2 ounces) imported Provolone
- 4 ounces lean cooked domestic ham
- ½ head of lettuce, shredded
- ½ cup (3 ounces) sliced fresh plum tomatoes
- ½ cup sliced onions
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 4 medium green olives, chopped fine, plus 1 tablespoon juice
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1 teaspoon salt
- pinch of hot red pepper

Remove fat from ham, if any. Shred ham and cheese. Combine all ingredients and toss lightly. Serves two, 290 calories each.

(Veal Parmigiana, Veal Scallopini, Veal and Peppers, Veal Mock Sausage . . . veal is the lowest calorie meat there is! For these and other diet recipes, plus reducing tips, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to SLIM GOURMET VEAL RECIPES, in care of The Pocono Record, 50 West Shore Trail, Sparta, N.J. 07871.)

Fair sampling

Snoopy may be playing it like Joe Cool at the J.M. Hill School's Country Fair but the children who crowded around to get in the picture, too, display a wide variety of expressions, mostly pleased. With the end of school close at hand, why not? (Arnold photo)

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

A thunderbolt that hits precariously close is something you don't forget in a hurry. One thunderbolt that is still vividly recalled even after 25 years is the one that struck just as John Sibley and Ruth Sunday were exchanging their wedding vows in the Stroudsburg Methodist Church, guests were remembering at their anniversary party.

This weekend's thunderstorm jolted a lot of people too, including the guests who had got out of the pool just minutes before one bolt hit one of the big trees at the Luce's home.

I watched a continuation of the same storm from inside an airplane on the ground at Washington's National Airport and that was pretty spectacular too with no mountains to hide any part of the giant streaks from zenith to the lighted capital building and the wings of the grounded plane flapping like a chicken's in the wind that preceded the advacing storm.

It was my weekend for seeing the Capitol from a different angle—from a family reunion on the hill across the Potomac with a family of grouse parading out of the yew hedge across the lawn and the incredible sight of the lights coming on in the city in the background.

Another unusual viewpoint is the terrace of the Kennedy Center which I saw for the first time. It's not in the classic tradition but it's impressive from its very size. Signs warn you to take note of the location of your car somewhere deep in the bowels of the earth if you expect to find it again.

Even in the great foyer, the sculptured head of John F. Kennedy looks much too big — and sort of itchy. But I was impressed with it all—especially our lunch in La Grande Scene. But I'll probably remember the lightening at the airport most vividly of all.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Tony Bennett has new ear-to-ear carpeting, black with the new "wet look" . . . Why did Phyllis Diller change her mind about having Lillian Roth in her strawhat play? . . . Big Freudian oops on Page 97 of the new "Free & Female" tome . . . Just before he decided to pack it in, George Sanders was working on a book about his two Gabor wives. Probably explains it . . . Paul Newman dropped three-Gs in the ill-fated Gore Vidalliance, "An Evening with Richard Nixon." Gore said it would run longer than Nixon. Haw.

Famed theatrical saloonkeeper Jim Downey Sr. is very ill in Roosevelt Hospital . . . Mrs. Gene Kelly was added to the serious clinic-list . . . Ditto James Garner with an old wartime knee injury. From "The Americanization of Emily"? . . . There's an objet-d'art with its own discreet plaque on a wall at the Metropolitan Museum dedicated quietly to Mary Jo Kopechne, who drowned in the Ted Kennedy accident. The donor is a very rich art-collector; odd, no newspaper ever noted it.

Aforenoted Jim Downey's son, Jim Jr., opened his own new spot, the Strawman, 72nd and Lexington . . . Mitzi Gaynor has a cute fan-collecting trick: jogs every afternoon while playing Reno's Harrah's spot — and invites all the audience to jog along . . . Goldie Hawn got the "Butterflies Are Free" flick role created on Broadway (beautifully) by Blythe Danner — whose consolation from Columbia Pix is the star role in its film version of "1776" — originated on Broadway by someone else entirely.

Fascinating melodic mix on the Milkman's Matinee: record arrangement pairing "It's a Blue World Without You" against "By the Time I Get to Phoenix" as counterpoint . . . Marshall Field V and Jamee Jacobs wed this summer . . . Dominique Sands named her baby Ian — last three letters of his dad's given name (Christian Marquand). Dominique and Chris don't intend to wed. He was Jean-Pierre Aumont's ex-son-in-law, remember? You don't? . . . Quo Vadis collected a fancy mob: Mrs. Doug Fairbanks Jr., Irene Selznick, Dr. Dana Atchley (a pavilion just was dedicated to the Doc at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center), Richard Rodgers, Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein II . . . What price education? Evelyn Scott learned all the feminine amenities such as curtsying and white gloves and manners at Miss Chandler's chic school in Boston. So her role in the TV "Peyton Place" serial — a tough saloonkeeper.

Suzanne Blackmer told her star husband, Sidney, he can take a movie — if she gets a role in it too . . . Morris Lansburgh paid Tom Jones $300 a week eight years ago at the Miami Beach Deauville. This year — $35,000 . . . Novelist Irving Wallace never flew before, so why marvel at his confusion while book-touring his "The Word" book. "Can I pay for my ticket at the depot," he asked. Depot! There almost aren't even any train depots now . . . Bright, healthy, gallant gent: bartender Joe Mackie at Roseland, 70 next month. Joe wears a Pacemaker to keep his big heart thumping properly.

Bobo Rockefeller paid $475 for a cup and saucer at the late Jessie Donahue's estate auction. And $2,750 for a pair of de Rehan plates; imagine if Bobo drops 'em while having tiffin? . . . Jack Klugman, the "Odd Couple" slob, collected a neat fortune for his Connecticut home and ponied up $185,000 for a Bel-Air (Hollywood) house . . . Don't think anything couldn't be worse than 42nd St. between 7th and 8th Aves.: the 8th Ave. stretch from 46th to 47th is sordid madness. Prosties, junkies, heisters — the works!

Tony Massena, who makes his screen debut in "The Love Gap," is the same handsome lad who sang 15 weeks in a row at the Copa; insiders say Tony's Got It . . . Producers get frustrated trying to sign Audrey Hepburn. Hasn't made a movie in two years. Because she's so happy being Mrs. Rome Psychiatrist. All that pasta and still weighs about a minute . . . This is Cultural Exchange? Two Dating Game TV winners won a junket to Moscow. Explain that show in the Kremlin!

Lisa Kirk's the next-fall leadoff star at the St. Regis Maisonette . . . Joan Hackett (stars in the Broadway whodunit "Night Watch") needs no limo to lug her to the theater: just thumbs a ride. Doesn't even think it's dangerous. Hope she's right . . . Jittery penologists fear the N.J. State Prison's next . . . The "Slaughter" flick starring Jim Brown gives him a delightful workout: slaps all its female stars around.

Romano Mussolini (Il Duce's kid who played jazz piano and formerly was wed to Sophia Loren's sister) is on a new trip: has a painting exhibition in a Rome gallery . . . Shortage of film-TV-cafe work will unload dozens of stars into the summer theaters. Angela Lansbury in "Mame," Judy Carne in "Cabaret," Jack Carter in "High Button Shoes," Jim Nabors in "The Yum Yum Tree," John Davidson in "Oklahoma," Gordon MacRae in "Milk and Honey" etc. . . . Cum Laude Harvard grad Arthur Roberts got his Karenin role in Eugenie Leontovich's New York "Anna K." hit on short notice. Learned it in two days before it opened.

Famed trucking firm, "The 7 Santini Bros.," has only two Santinis left; very old. They don't move much any more . . . Fun City: cab stopped in front of the General Motors Bldg. at 5th and 59th and a cop wouldn't let it tarry even the moments it took to pick up a woman — on crutches.

Meyer Davis and his big society band jet to London for the huge pre-4th of July bash at the U.S. Embassy: our ambassador, Walter Annenberg, is hoisting the whole tab . . . Meyer and musicians will be brought in as "temporary members of the household staff" to avoid conflict with the British musicians union . . . On the 4th itself, Meyer Davis will toot in Dublin at Castletown House, the Guinness castle outside Dublin in honor of the Georgian Society . . . Our Irish ambassador, John D. V. Moore, is patron.

Philly cops have made 400 arrests for that imbecilic criminal irritation, slopping indelible graffiti all over public places. So pointless, slobby . . . When Meyer Davis is in London, he'd better watch out walking near the Big Ben clock: it's suddenly been discovered eight inches out of line. Probably been tilted that far these 114 years. Worried Britons finally are getting around to it . . . Bill's Gay 90s opened its sidewalk cafe: one table. Mini-cafe, mini-host — comic Jerry Bergen, four-feet-nine. And ten feet of fun.

Ann Landers

Hair girls' fault

Dear Ann Landers: That letter from "Ohio Teen" could have been written by me. I am also a high school senior who hates to kiss a guy who has a moustache or a beard. But let's be honest — we girls are responsible for all that hair.

It all started when the Beatles came to this country and the teenyboppers shrieked, fainted and went completely ape over the group. The American boys felt they had to imitate the Beatles to win the favor of the girls. So they let their hair grow long and the inevitable happened. In true American style "bigger is better and most is best."

The youth of our nation became hair-worshippers. Hair became a symbol of the New Culture, independence and rebellion. Most parents hated it. Sample dialogue: "Get a haircut or leave this house."

So now it's up to the girls to get rid of the hairy problem. And it IS a problem. Keeping all that hair clean is work, and most guys don't bother. We girls must now say, "Off with the brush — or there'll be no kisses." Are you with me, Ann?

The All Clear in Eau Claire

Dear Claire: I don't need to be with you. There's nobody with a beard or moustache I care to kiss. But lots of luck.

---

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago we went to Canada for a vacation. There was a guided tour — courtesy of the motel. The guide kept referring to the Canadian side of the Falls and the American side of the Falls. My father called the guide's attention to the fact that Canada is just as much a part of America as the United States.

This is my question, Ann: The inhabitants of South America, Central America and North America are Americans. The inhabitants of Canada are also Canadians. The people of Mexico are called Mexicans. But what are the people of the United States called —other than Americans?

Lansing Query

Dear Q.: U.S. citizens.

---

Dear Ann Landers: You have waged a most successful campaign against drop-in-visitors who don't even knock, for which we congratulate you. Many people who thought they owed it to friends and relatives to be on 24-hour call have come to realize that they were being taken advantage of. Your columns gave them the courage to put an end to it. Now will you do something for those of us who own small yachts?

A great many landlubbers don't know it's not only bad manners, but a legal offense to set foot on a boat until the words "come aboard" are spoken. For those who don't wish to shout, a light knock on the hull can be heard inside. And now the matter of shoes. It is an unspeakable gaffe to come aboard a yacht wearing ordinary street shoes. It could cause permanent damage to painted and varnished surfaces.

I am aware that a rather small segment of your readers own yachts but since you are read by people in every walk of life I felt this was the very place to go for help to get my message across.

Vo-tech board names coordinator for school

STROUDSBURG — The joint committee of the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School has appointed Donald R. Hopkins, of Lancaster, as curriculum and instruction coordinator.

Hopkins has 16 years trade experience in a machine shop and holds a coordinator's certificate. He is presently teaching at Coatesville-Central Chester County Vo-Tech School.

His salary was set at $14,000. Hopkins was picked over another finalist for the post, William Gary, a teacher at Middle Bucks County Vo-Tech School.

The joint committee also heard the latest progress report by John Ridyard, of the architectural firm of Breslin and Ridyard, school designers. He told the group the general contractor, Vito Construction Co. of Stroudsburg, is "one to two months behind in schedule."

Three months remain to complete the project by the Sept. 6 opening date, Ridyard noted.

He pointed out the "shops should be ready by September — just the shops." No firm commitment was made regarding the cafeteria when the architect was questioned by director Donald Stone.

But Dr. Walter E. Brown, executive director, saw "no crucial problem here" in reporting the Sept. 6 opening. Brown said he was confident the school will be able to receive students "on some basis in September."

Ridyard said the heating contractor was 68 per cent completed, plumbing, 76; general, 65; electrical, 73; and food service, 60.

General hospital to open short-term parking area

EAST STROUDSBURG — A new short-term parking area with a nine-car capacity, which will be used exclusively for parking while patients are being admitted or picked up at time of discharge, has been constructed at the front entrance of the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Parking in the new area will be allowed for 15 minutes and, if effective, will cut down on congestion in the hospital driveway.

An extension of the employes' parking lot onto hospital property on Prospect Street between the campus learning center at ESSC and the Kistler residence will provide an additional 42 spaces for parking, bringing the lot capacity to the 180-car figure.

A right-turn-only situation has been developed in the exit to Prospect Street from the new parking lot and a left turn onto Prospect Street from the old lot has been created to improve traffic flow.

A spokesman for the hospital said that construction on the two areas should be completed by June 12.

S-burg sets summer sessions

Students living outside the Stroudsburg School District may also attend this program.

Classes will be held for grades 9 through 12 in the evenings from 5:30 to 8:50, and grades 7 and 8 will conduct their sessions from 9 a.m. to noon.

Students interested in attending the summer program are asked to contact the Stroudsburg High School guidance office.

League schedules Tocks walk

STROUDSBURG — The Lenni Lenape League has rescheduled its Tocks Island Dam site walk for Saturday and Sunday in an attempt to show visitors the adverse ecological effects the proposed reservoir would have on the area.

The event was originally scheduled for May 20 and 21 but cancelled because of rain.

Participants will have the option of either walking, bicycling or driving from Interstate Route 80 to Tocks Island.

Tocks information, prepared by the league, and a map of the area will be available at the parking area of the Worthington State Park and at the dam site.

State troopers receive awards

SCRANTON — Clifford Cramer, president of the AAA Motor Club of Northeastern Pennsylvania, recently presented awards to two state policemen for bravery and "humane action above and beyond the call of duty" in separate Monroe County accidents early this year.

Trooper Robert Werts and Trooper Delvin E. Powell were presented awards for their help in saving the lives of three motorists.

Werts assisted John Eldridge after the truck Eldridge was driving hit a concrete stone and brick sign and rolled down an embankment, pinning Eldridge in the cab.

Trooper Werts worked in the rain and darkness, using a wet road map as a splint to bind Eldridge's nearly-severed leg together until he could be transported safely to Monroe County Hospital. Eldridge later wrote a letter of thanks to the trooper crediting him with saving the leg and Eldridge's life.

Trooper Powell was credited with saving Laurence Katz, Queens Village, N.Y., from drowning in McMichaels Creek off Interstate Route 80 near Exit 47 on March 18, 1972.

In company with Trooper Richard C. Sude, Powell responded to a call for assistance and found the Katz vehicle sitting on its top in the creek at the bottom of a 150-foot embankment.

The trooper disregarded the cold water temperatures and entered the water, finding no other victim in the car. However, noticing the body of a man floating in the creek some 100 feet from the site, he rescued the unconscious victim and brought him to the top of the bank and safety.

Trooper Powell administered first aid treatment to Mr. Katz, who suffered head and chest injuries, and to his female companion, who required splints for a fractured arm and leg.

Also attending the award ceremonies were Colonel William Cooper, Regimental Headquarters in Harrisburg; Reed Grosvenor, safety director for the AAA in Scranton; Major Edward W. Wojick, Area 2 commander; Capt. John W. Kistler, commanding officer, Troop N., Hazleton; Sgt. Emil Weber, officer in charge of the Stroudsburg Station and Kenneth Johns, AAA emergency road service operator, R.D., East Stroudsburg.

Council to install lights

MOUNT POCONO — Mount Pocono Borough Council Monday decided to install several new street lights in hazardous areas on the recommendation of a Pennsylvania Power and Light representative.

Two new street lights of 6,650 lumineres will be placed in the downtown shopping center, and one light of 3,350 lumineres will be installed on School Drive and Kinney Ave.

Council also plans to move the street light that is presently at the intersection of Route 611 and 940 West a few feet, and increase the lumineres to 20,000. One other light of 3,350 lumineres will be installed on Pine Hill Road.

In other business, council awarded a contract for emergency patch-work on borough roads to Art DePue. The work was scheduled to be completed by June 1, but the shoulder on Pine Hill Road is still in need of repair.

Council accepted the resignation of George D. Bean, civil defense director, which will become effective July 1. In a letter to the council, Bean said he was planning to leave the Pocono area in September.

A motion was made by the council to commend the Girl and Boy Scouts for their work on "Clean Up Day". The two groups helped to clean streets and painted borough park and recreational equipment.

Recreation area problems to be topic of discussion

BY ANDREA B. STERN
Pocono Record Reporter

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area Supt. Peter DeGelleke will meet with high level National Park Service officials today in an effort to solve some of the park's mounting problems — among them the burning of part of Millbrook Village by an arsonist over Memorial Day Weekend and a squatter's recent assault on a park ranger.

DeGelleke said the park's guard staff has already been increased and expressed hope that today's meeting will result in increased park personnel.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.) is also providing impetus for an increase in park personnel to deal with the seemingly ever present problems of arson and vandalism.

In December, in reply to such a querry from Thompson, Chester L. Brooks, director of the NPS's northeast region division, had claimed law enforcement personnel could be moved into the area on "very short notice" should the need arise.

Following the Millbrook burnings, Thompson again urged Brooks on the December offer.

"I would respectfully suggest that the burning of the Millbrook Church provides the necessary impetus to assign added personnel to the Recreation Area," he wrote.

"U.S. park police are still available if we have indications we have a serious law enforcement problem but the problem we have right now is the protection problem," De Gelleke said Monday, referring to the recent fires.

He noted the NPS has faced a restriction in increasing the park's staff due to the current employment freeze. "There is a very strict ceiling on the total number of personnel that can be employed in the federal government and this is broken down into each bureau and each park," DeGelleke explained.

Still, he is optimistic that today's meeting will offer solutions to "handle" the problem.

"Certainly the burning of the (Millbrook) church like that has generated a tremendous avalanche of public resentment and I know the public is deeply disturbed," he maintained. "Now we have to make some plans as to what the future will hold for Millbrook."

And this tiny historic village's fate is still uncertain, according to DeGelleke.

"The church was the center of the whole thing and we could never really replace it either by reconstructing it or moving another one in," he contended. "Still we need a church there. It was sort of the hub."

DeGelleke suggested, of the two choices, he would perfer relocating another church at Millbrook.

"In some ways I'd like to see another church found. Reconstruction would be a memorial but it just wouldn't have the same meaning."

He said public interest generated by the fire has led him to believe "a great many people would be willing to contribute" toward moving in another church.

"The government can't do it but we can work with the public. It's really their heritage and we are part of them," he offered. "It's an opportunity to put something together for the future."

State police investigators along with the FBI have been called in to assist the New Jersey State Police from the Blairstown Barracks who are continuing their investigation.

Also, a group of concerned citizens from the Millbrook-Blairstown area are offering a $1,000 reward for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons involved. Anyone with information is urged to contact the New Jersey State Police at Blairstown, phone 201-362-6128.

Prior to the burnings, Millbrook, a 17th century stopover for copper miners, had been scheduled to open on July 1 as an authentic historic attraction of the park.

The May 28 fire destroyed the church which was built by Methodists in 1860 and the general store containing numerous antique items donated by area residents.

Corps denies any intention of allowing Tocks to lapse

STROUDSBURG — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Tuesday denied an alleged claim by Rep. Pierre S. DuPont (R-Del.) that they intend to allow the Tocks Island dam project to "lapse."

But a DuPont aide, in response to a barrage of telephone calls questioning the Delaware congressman's address before the Sierra Club's annual meeting in Wilmington on Monday, said the remark was reported out of context.

"He might have said the project has stopped, but used 'stopped' in the sense of being in limbo," DuPont's assistant, Tom Evans, clarified at the congressman's Washington, D.C., offices.

"The best we can piece together is that some 20-year-old reporter from a local radio station misconstrued the whole thing. The congressman was reviewing the status of the case at this point as part of his talk and mentioned the Corps has not answered CEQ's (Council on Environmental Quality) objections.

"As everyone knows, that happens to be the status of the thing at this moment. We are waiting for some answers just like every other congressman and senator. Somehow this guy turned it into the fact that the project was dead and God only knows how."

Evans conceded DuPont "may have used the word 'lapsed' " but claimed he had meant "temporary."

DuPont was further reported to have said he was told by Russell Train, CEQ chairman, that the Corps had admitted the project would harm the environment.

Because of the controversy raised, Train, currently heading up the Global Environmental Conference in Stockholm, was contacted by telephone in Sweden Tuesday afternoon by Alvin Alm, CEQ chief of program review.

"There's nothing to it at all," Alm contended after speaking with Train. "He said he never told DuPont that."

Meanwhile the Corps, also faced with a flood of inquiries concerning DuPont's address, issued their own statement.

"We have been directed by both the administration and the Congress to proceed with the project and, unless we hear otherwise, we plan to continue our effort," stressed Perry Stirling, Corps public information officer with the Philadelphia district office.

"The Corps of Engineers has made a detailed environmental study of the Tocks Island Lake project as directed by law and has concluded that the project is environmentally sound," he declared.

During his Tocks assessment on Monday, DuPont, one of the dam's most vocal opponents, proposed the construction of a network of smaller dams along the Delaware River — an alternative he suggested would serve the water conservation aims outlined in the original basinwide comprehensive plan.

Planners close session to ponder sewage laws

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County planners dropped into the dark of a closed door executive session Tuesday to hack away at new state sewerage regulations binding their action.

The new revisions to the Pennsylvania Sewage Facilities Act threaten to halt construction on all new subdivisions under one acre in size in the county because it does not have an official sewerage plan.

According to one informed source, the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission closed its doors to tackle the crisis of a Tobyhanna Township development that cannot be approved because of the lack of an official plan — the first such case since the restrictions became effective on May 15.

The planners were also expected to discuss ways of moulding a sewage study for the western portion of the county into an official plan for those municipalities covered by it.

In other business during the commission's regular meeting, a heated debate ensued over a Middle Smithfield Township subdivision when it was not included in the list ready for final approval.

Harry F. Lee, attorney for the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention which owns the Lake in the Pines development, contended he had been led to believe the final engineering plan was ready for approval and said the new omissions presented at the meeting should have been brought to his attention earlier.

Accuses developers

Subdivision committee chairman David Neison accused the developers and Lee of "coercing" the board into granting approval.

Lee took issue stating, "It was represented to me that section one was proper. The way we left it (after recent meetings with the committee) was that we would be notified if any details had to be corrected.

"I think it is certainly a remission of some sort if we were not notified at this late date."

When informed by the commission of the additional requirements necessary for approval, Rev. Gordon Korb of the Baptist Convention, blasted, "Did you call me to inform me that these plans were not in conformance so that we could come prepared?"

Commission chairman John Bitzer asked if the planners were "on trial" and Korb replied, "I believe the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention is on trial because we have been trying to do this correctly."

Stating he was not present at the previous committee meeting with the developers, Neison charged, "I resent being coerced and pressured into approving something I know nothing about."

"What you are saying is because you were not at the meeting, we are coercing you," Lee contended.

"I'm just saying I don't like this pressure," Neison retorted.

Tax credit decision tabled

BRODHEADSVILLE — The Chestnuthill Township Supervisors decided Tuesday night to table a motion that would offer a partial wage credit to residents who work in New Jersey and paid income tax to that state last year.

Under Act 511, the "tax anything law" in Pennsylvania, residents who pay tax to another state are entitled to the one per cent tax they pay to their municipality during the same period of time.

Solicitor Lester Brown told the group the Pleasant Valley School Board will rule on the credit this month.

The supervisors decided to table action on the matter until the school board makes a recommendation on the credit.

A representative from Blue Ridge Cable Television Co. asked the supervisors to sign a letter addressed to the Federal Communications Commission.

The letter stated that the township has approved Blue Ridge's application to install its services in the township.

In order to obtain the required certificate of compliance from the FCC, a letter from the township must be forwarded showing the company has the right to operate in the area.

Due to the holiday on July 4, the Chestnuthill supervisors will hold their next board meeting at 7 p.m. July 11 at the township municipal building.

In other business, board chairman Albert Frantz suggested that the supervisors adopt an ordinance that would require all roads to be blacktopped before they could be taken over by the township.

The matter was tabled until the next meeting.

A parking lot plan for the Saddle Ridge development was approved for recording purposes.

Two sections of the Sunnybrook development, located on Sugar Hollow Road, were also approved. These plans include 34 lots that contain three or more acres each.

Road supervisor Claude Possinger told the board that one resident in the Sherwood Forest Area keeps filling in the drainage ditch near his driveway. The ditch is on the township right of way and is supposed to be kept open, according to Possinger.

The supervisors also received a check for $51 to cover the cost of inspecting 750 feet of underground telephone cable that has been laid on Twp. Rte. 455 by the Commonwealth Telephone Co.

Since the phone company has not completed the job as yet, the supervisors agreed to inform the state highway department office in Allentown that the job could not be inspected at this time.

Residents question zone law

TANNERSVILLE — Pocono Township Supervisors conducted a lively discussion with local residents on the township's new zoning laws at their Tuesday meeting.

Several citizens wanted to know the minimum specifications for building a home on a lot.

Danny Harnden, zoning officer, explained that one acre was required for the placement of a mobile home or a single family dwelling. Supervisors referred questioning citizens to the township planning and zoning commission for further answers to their inquiries.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kresge, of Scotrun, presented a complaint about a local policeman who had drawn his gun on teenagers in possession of alcohol. Kresge believed that township policemen should be forced to take additional schooling in order to prevent such actions from occuring.

"I am not opposed to the police," Kresge said, "but I do believe they should be trained properly so they can adequately deal with such situations."

The supervisors responded that the police were qualified, and that a written complaint should be submitted to the supervisors to help resolve the problem. They suggested that a meeting could then be held and the facts of the situation presented.

Another resident, James B. Clancy, questioned the supervisors concerning the patroling of his property by the zoning officer while he was away. Clancy maintained that his property was private and that such surveillance was improper.

Strunk to resign as codes enforcer

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — It took less than six months for the embattled Joint Codes Enforcement Office to lose its head.

Tuesday, the resignation of Joint Codes Enforcement Officer Mitchell Strunk was presented to the East Stroudsburg Borough Council. A search for qualified persons who might fill the $8,000 a year post was approved by the council.

Strunk said his resignation was for personal reasons.

Since its inception, the codes enforcement office has been controversial. When a systematic inspection of the Borough of Stroudsburg began last January, citizen protest over enforcement methods resulted in a series of meetings to clarify the program of housing inspection.

When the furor persisted, East Stroudsburg pulled back on the ordinance governing the codes inspection. Council deleted portions of Section 2.3 of the ordinance entitled "Right of Entry."

It stated the codes enforcement officer would be assisted by municipal officials including police and firemen in securing the right of entry.

The retrenchment was admitted to be an act of pacification by the council.

But problems for the codes enforcers did not end with council's actions. Condemnation notices posted on houses in Stroudsburg's First and Third Wards were issued, but the occupants were not moved because they had no place to go.

Shortage of low income housing in the borough still haunts the enforcement of the codes.

In other action, the East Stroudsburg Council unanimously approved the reduction of parking fines in the borough from one dollar to 50 cents.

The motion to amend the ordinance governing parking fines was introduced by Councilman J. Wade Arnst.

Arnst said he had been approached by East Stroudsburg businessmen to reduce the fine. "They believe business in this town is bad enough now without the one dollar fine," Arnst said.

Floyd Holloway, a borough citizen living at 52 Smith Street, appeared before council to complain college student. neighbors were disturbing his peace.

He also said neighbor John Penz had escavated land adjacent to his causing an "eyesore" more than a year ago. Holwoway wanted council's help with both his neighbors.

Council President Pearley Hunt said the borough was presently working with the college on the student housing issue and he directed Borough Manager Donald Gage to investigate the escavation complaint.

First Ward Playground in disrepair

Park conditions blasted

By JOE MIEGOC
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Standing on his porch across the street from the First Ward Playground, Carlee Jones pointed to the facility.

"That playground is going to the dogs," he said, pointing to the fenced-in area which serves as a recreational facility for the children of the neighborhood.

Monroe County Planning Commission Secretary Arthur Kitzman, when contacted to explain why the playground hasn't been cleaned up yet, replied that the county's responsibility for the upkeep of the facility didn't begin "technically" until the close of the school year, June 18.

"The weather is the cause of the high grass," he said, adding that someone had been assigned to cut the knee-high grass Tuesday but had been prevented from doing so by the threat of rain.

"Those kids aren't supposed to be in there, but we can't stop them from climbing the fences and getting in," he added. "That would force us to hire personnel to do that. The county is not responsible for the playground until the schools are let out and not before then. We put locks on the gates, but they're broken into."

His advice? "We are having our regular meeting next Monday and those people having complaints can voice them then."

Mrs. Lucille Gallagher, 93 Third St., said that this was the first time since she has been living there that the grass hadn't been cut by now.

"I worry each time the children go in there," she said, "and some of them have told me they've seen snakes in that high grass." Mrs. Gallagher's children are adults now and have children of their own in the area.

A look around the playground revealed many potentially dangerous situations for small children in the area served by the playground. Empty soda cans and pieces of wood pierced with nails were found along the bordering fences and concentrated near a trash can in the middle of the playground. Bits of glass from broken bottles were thrown about.

The murky water filling the swimming pool is dotted with old wood and cans, too, plus a few abandoned volleyballs. Large rocks, some standing three inches above the ground, dot the path worn by children pushing the merry-go-round to get it moving so they can ride it. Rickety wooden boxes stand near the elevated merry-go-round, boxes the children stand on to board the apparatus.

Rufus W. Little, 103 Third St., who has been living in the Third Street neighborhood for 23 years, echoed Mrs. Gallagher's concern.

"I worry about them every time they go over there," he said, adding that since the playground has been there, he had never seen it in such condition so late in the year. "They had the grass cut and the pool filled by this time last year.,"

A man visiting his parents on Third Street replied in the same manner when questioned about the playground.

"I live up on Fifth Street now, but my kids come down here to visit their grandmother and play with their friends," he said adding that he, too, had heard his children tell of seeing snakes in the grass.

Johnnie Fields, 116 Third St., also said that this was the first time he had seen the playground like this. "The grass was always cut by this time," he said, "but not this year." A neighbor said that Johnnie, who lives at the corner of the playground, had been there "probably 40 years."

Mrs. Russell Hilton, First Ward Representative on the Planning Commission, agreed with Kitzman in saying that they (the Commission) had been trying to get the grass cut and the playground cleaned up for some time.

"We're working on it, but the playground is not supposed to open until June 18," she said, echoing Kitzman's statement that the rain of recent weeks had been preventing such measures.

"We've been trying for three weeks, but the rain has held us up."

The next step for concerned people of the area is for them to go before the Commission at Monday's meeting and voice their complaints, a step which some of the people questioned indicated they would take.

Gurney admits bringing Grant into Unser's pit

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Car owner-designer Dan Gurney, appealing the penalty that cost his driver Jerry Grant a second-place finish in the recent Indianapolis "500," admitted frankly Tuesday he brought the car into the wrong pit.

"It was my snap decision to bring him into Bobby Unser's pit," Gurney told a three-man board of judges hearing his appeal from a ruling demoting Grant from runnerup to 12th place in the standings.

The difference in prize money from runnerup to 12th is about $72,000 from the million-dollar purse.

Gurney, designer-builder of the famed Eagle race cars who finished second twice in the "500" himself before retiring two years ago, said he wanted to have the option of adding fuel from Unser's tank long after Unser, the early frontrunner in the race, was eliminated by mechanical problems.

The two pits were next to each other. Grant, Seattle, Wash., became Unser's teammate on the Gurney crew shortly before the "500" while Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., sat on the pole as the fastest qualifier. Grant turned in the fourth-best speed. He led for 16 laps before going into the pits, turning over first place to eventual winner Mark Donohue with just 13 laps to go.

Grant said he made the pit stop, his fifth, to change a badly worn front tire.

"The vibration was terrible," he said. "I feared I might crash or the tire would go."

Gurney described the "confusion" in his pit as Grant came in and said his crew had connected fuel lines before he could have them off.

He said the hoses were connected "about five or six seconds," during which time 25 to 30 gallons of fuel could have been added. But he insisted Grant needed no additional fuel to complete the race.

While conceding the rule violation that forbids a car from being refueled from another machine's gas tank, Gurney said he was appealing the severity of the penalty by Chief Steward Harlan Fengler.

"In all my experience I've never seen a penalty of such severity," he said. "I cannot understand why it is so severe." He said the illegal procedure "in no way influenced the outcome of the race."

Gurney quoted a member of his pit crew as saying there was "An awful lot" of fuel left in Grant's car at the end of the race.

"We're talking about an illegal refueling procedure," said Fengler, himself a former race driver. "The car was refueled from a tank that did not belong to them, which is a violation of the rules."

Gurney retorted there was no specific penalty for such a violation and suggested that USAC adopt one.

Charlie Brockman, USAC president, acted as president of the board. The two other judges were former USAC president Thomas W. Binford and Howard Wilcox, a vice president.

Brockman said no decision would be announced before today.

"Our first priority is justice rather than speed," he said. But he said a decision would be reached as quickly as possible.

Also attending were drivers Al Unser, Bobby's brother who was elevated to second place after Grant's demotion; fourth place Sam Sessions; George Bignotti, Chief mechanic for the Vel's Parnelli Jones Team who filed the initial protest of Grant's illegal refueling; mechanic Clint Brawner and two other USAC officials, Don Cummins, the referee, and Frank DelRoy, chairman of the technical committee.

Agee's single in seventh leads Mets to 3-2 victory

NEW YORK (UPI)—Tommie Agee singled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and Tug McGraw pitched two innings of scoreless relief ball to save Jim McAndrews' fifth victory Tuesday night as the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds, 3-2.

The Reds, who had won nine of their last 10 games, scored their runs off McAndrew in the fourth inning on a two-run homer by Johnny Bench. It was Bench's eighth homer in the last seven games and his 14th of the season.

The homer put the Reds into a 2-0 lead but New York scored a run in the bottom of the fourth on John Milner's homer off starter Gary Nolan and then won the game with single runs in the sixth and seventh innings.

Third inning rally enough for Atlanta

MONTREAL (UPI)—Darrell Evans' two-run homer highlighted a three-run rally in the third inning Tuesday night and led the Atlanta Braves to a 3-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Felix Millan led off the third and was safe on a throwing error by shortstop Tim Foli. Millan moved to second when Ralph Garr flied out and took third on Hank Aaron's groundout.

Rico Carty followed with a single to score Millan and Evans' ninth homer of the year made the score 3-0.

Three champions among 12 honored

SWIFTWATER — Two Lehigh-Northampton League track champions were among 12 athletes honored Tuesday night during Pocono Mountain High School's annual athletic awards banquet.

Detroit cops win in opener

DETROIT (UPI) —A three-run home run by Ed Brinkman plus a two-run shot by Aurelio Rodriguez helped power Mickey Lolich and the Detroit Tigers to a 8-6 win over the California Angels Tuesday night in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader.

California held a 4-0 lead after five innings of the second game.

Lolich was perfect through four innings but a freak hit by Bob Oliver leading off the fifth apparently unsettled the Detroit lefthander and he needed relief help from Chuck Seelbach over the final 1 1-3 innings to register his ninth win against four losses.

Lolich had an 8-3 lead and a five-hitter until a single by Ken Berry, a double by Andy Kosco, and a two-run home run by Oliver brought Seelbach in to earn his third save of the season.

1-19 Philadelphia defeated as Roberts aids own game

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Pitcher Dave Roberts hit a two-run homer and received ninth-inning relief help from Fred Gladding en route to his fourth victory of the season Tuesday night as the Houston Astros beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-3.

It was the 19th loss in 20 games for the Phillies, who scored three runs and kayoed Roberts in the ninth.

Houston scored two first inning runs on a single by Bob Watson, his first of two for the night. One run scored on the hit and a second crossed the plate when shortstop Larry Bowa threw wide to second on a forceout attempt.

The Astros scored two more with two out in the fourth when Jimmy Stewart doubled and Roberts followed with his homer.

Twins gain win in 15th inning

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Steve Brye singled home Rod Carew with one out in the 15th inning to give the Minnesota Twins a 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Tuesday night and extend the three-time American League champion's longest losing streak since 1969 to five games.

Ray Corbin gained the victory, pitching the last four innings.

Carew led off the 15th with a single. With one out, Scott walked Bobby Darwin and Brye's single to left scored Carew from second base.

The Twins rallied for three runs off Jim Palmer in the ninth inning to tie the score at four. Palmer, who had tamed the Twins on six hits over the first eight innings, was tagged for a two-run homer by Eric Soderholm with one out in the ninth that brought the Twins to within one run.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the third on a pair of singles and an infield out, but the Orioles rallied for three runs in the fourth on four singles and a sacrifice fly by Andy Etchebarren.

Bando, Jackson lead Oakland past Tribe

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Sal Bando singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and Reggie Jackson capped a four-run ninth with a three-run homer Tuesday night to give the Oakland Athletics a 7-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Bando, who also drove in the first Oakland run in the opening inning, smashed a two-out single to left field off reliever Steve Mingori to score Joe Rudi, who had doubled home Bert Campaneris from second with the tying run.

Vida Blue, who was seeking his first victory of the season, was tagged for two runs on four hits in the third inning.

Darold Knowles replaced Blue and got Jack Brohamer to ground to first, but when Mike Epstein threw home for no apparent reason the bases were filled with one out. Reliever Rollie Fingers took over and got Cleveland starter Vince Colbert to hit into a home to first double play and struck out Eddie Leon.

Padres grab shortstop as pick in baseball draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dave Roberts, a 21-year-old junior at the University of Oregon who has traveled as far as Cali, Colombia, and Alaska to play baseball, was the no. 1 pick of the San Diego Padres Tuesday at the eighth-annual baseball summer draft.

Roberts, a strapping 6-foot-3 and 216 pounds, earned all-star recognition as a shortstop while playing in the World University Games in Cali in 1970 and for the Alaska Goldpanners semi-pro team the past two summers.

He switched to third base this season and batted .410 with 12 home runs and 47 runs batted in in 37 games for Oregon. Roberts still has a year of eligibility left, but he is learning toward making a career of baseball on the professional level.

If the money is right he should be the second Dave Roberts to make the Padres roster in the past two years. Roberts, a lefthanded pitcher, was the Padres' best hurler in 1971 but was traded to the Houston Astros in the off-season. The two are not related.

Roberts was only the second collegian to be selected as the no. 1 pick since the Oakland Athletics chose Rick Monday, then of Arizona State, in the inaugural 1965 draft.

San Diego earned the right to select Roberts by finishing with the worst record (61-100) in the National League while the Cleveland Indians had second choice because of their 60-102 mark in the American League. The remainder of the major league clubs picked in inverse order of their 1971 finish.

The Indians went for Richard Manning, a 17-year-old shortstop whiz who batted .613 for his LaSalle High School team in Niagara Falls, N.Y. Manning's coach called him "the greatest high school hitter I've ever seen."

Cleveland may have picked a plum in the second round when they took Bob Grossman, who pitched two no-hitters for the University of Maryland this year.

But the Philadelphia Phillies thought Larry Christenson, a high school pheenom from Marysville, Wash. was the best young pitcher in the country and they made him their top pick in the first round. Christenson struck out 143 batters in 72 innings while walking only 12 as he posted an amazing 0.28 earned run average for his school.

The Texas Rangers went for another infielder, Roy Lee Howell, a high school third baseman from Lompoc, Calif. while the Montreal Expos selected Bobbie Goodman, a highly regarded catcher from Memphis, Tenn. Goodman, just 17-years-old, hit .571 for Memphis' Bishop Byrne High School this season.

The No. 6 pick went to Milwaukee and the Brewers took Danny Thomas, a speedster who played all infield positions for Southern Illinois University. Thomas is just a sophomore but he has indicated he'd like to play pro ball right now.

The Cincinnati Reds selected right handed pitcher Larry Payne of Bedias, Texas, whole the Minnesota Twins chose Richard Ruthven, a right handed pitcher from Fresno State College.

The ninth pick was Stephen Englishbey, a high school outfielder from South Houston, Tex., who was taken by the Houston Astros.

The California Angles picked 10th in the first round and went for Dave Chalk, a third baseman from the University of Texas. Chalk, a teammate of Burt Hooton — a summer draft pick last year who has already pitched a no-hitter this season with the Chicago Cubs — has a .366 four year career average. He will finish out the season at Omaha, Neb., where the Longhorns will play in the College World Series beginning Friday.

The remainder of the first round picks went this way: Atlanta — Preston Hanna, Pitcher, Pensacola, Fla; Chicago (AL)—Mike Ondia, centerfielder, Cordova, Calif.; New York (NL)—Richard Bengston, catcher, Peoria, Ill.; New York (AL;—Scott McGregor, pitcher, El Segundo, Calif.; Chicago (NL) — Brian Vernoy, pitcher, Westminster, Calif.; Boston — Joel Bishop, shortstop, Sacramento, Calif.; Los Angeles—John Harbin, shortstop, Greenville, S.C.; Kansas City—Jamie Quirk, shortstop, Whittier, Calif.; San Francisco—Robert Dressler, pitcher, Portland, Ore.; Detroit—Jerry Manuel, shortstop Rancho Cordova, Calif., St. Louis—Danniel Larson, pitcher, Alhambra Calif.; Oakland—Chester Lemon, shortstop, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh—Dwayne Peltier, shortstop, Anaheim, Calif.; and Baltimore—Kenneth Thomas, catcher, Bellville, Ohio.

The draft, in its regular phase, is expected to last through this afternoon and could go as many as 30 rounds.

It will be followed by the secondary phase which covers free agents selected in previous drafts but not signed.

STROUDSBURG — Buck's ESSO romped over Vito Construction, 17-2, and Dairy Queen trounced Burger Chef, 13-5, Tuesday in Stroudsburg Minor League play.

California winger switches loops along with collegian

BOSTON (UPI)—Right winger Tom Webster of the California Golden Seals and collegian John Danby signed multi-year contracts Tuesday with the New England Whalers of the new World Hockey Association.

Webster said he decided to leave the National Hockey League because he was "concerned about long-range security" for his family, rather than with short-term salaries, and because the NHL "has a number of great superstars and I would like to be known just like anybody else."

Webster saw only limited duty last season with the Seals because of injuries. He scored three goals and had two assists in 12 games.

Webster was drafted by the Boston Bruins in 1966, played nine games with the Bruins in the 1968-69 season and two more the following year before the Buffalo Sabres claimed him in the 1970 expansion draft.

The Sabres promptly traded him to Detroit for goalie Roger Crozier and Webster played the entire season with the Red Wings in 1970-71, picking up 30 goals and 37 assists.

Detroit traded him to California in October of 1971 for defenseman Ron Stackhouse.

Expansion teams hold hockey draft

Former Canadien picked by Atlanta

MONTREAL (UPI) — Paul Myre, former second-string goalkeeper for the Montreal Canadiens, was selected Tuesday by the Atlanta Flames as the No. 1 choice in the National Hockey League expansion draft.

The Montreal Canadiens filled in their protected list by picking forward Chuck Lefley, who played last season with the Nova Scotia Voyageurs.

The Long Island Islanders named Gerry DesJardins, former goalie with the Chicago Black Hawks, as their first pick in the draft.

The 14 existing NHL teams protected 15 players and two goalkeepers. The California Golden Seals and the Philadelphia Flyers were given exemptions in the goalkeeping department.

The draft is operated on a system whereby each time a team loses a player, the team adds another player to its own protected list.

Third choice in the draft went to Atlanta, which picked goaltender Dan Bouchard from the Boston Bruins. Bouchard played last season with the Boston Braves of the American Hockey League.

Fourth choice saw former Los Angeles Kings goalie Billy Smith go to the New York Islanders.

Following the goalkeepers draft, the choices were reversed for player selection for the two teams and the Islanders got defenseman Bert Crashley, who belonged to the Montreal Canadiens.

Sixth choice in the draft went to Atlanta, which selected Kerry Ketter, Voyageurs' defenseman.

The seventh choice saw the Islanders pick Dave Hudson, owned by the Black Hawks organization who played last year with Dallas.

Atlanta, for No. 8 choice, picked forward Norm Gratton of the New York Rangers who played last year with Omaha in the Central Hockey League.

Ninth choice went to the Islanders, who picked veteran forward Ed Westfall from the Boston Bruins.

For No. 10 choice, Atlanta picked forward Ron Harris from the Detroit Red Wings.

The 11th pick to the Islanders saw them picking forward Gary Peters from the Boston Bruins.

Atlanta, for the 12th choice, took forward Larry Romanchych, from the Dallas farm club of the Chicago Black Hawks.

The 13th round saw the Islanders pick defenseman Larry Hornung from the St. Louis Blues.

The 14th selection, by Atlanta,. gave them forward Bill MacMillan from the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Islanders, for the 15th selection, picked defenseman Brian Lefley, of the Omaha farm club of the New York Rangers.

Atlanta, for the 16th choice, picked forward Randy Manery, who played last season in the Detroit farm system at Fort Worth in the Central League.

NHL board of governors OKs Canada-Russia series

MONTREAL (UPI) —The National Hockey League Board of Governors Tuesday unanimously approved participation by league players in the proposed Canada-Russia hockey series, but suggested a later set of dates for the home games.

Hockey Canada, the body responsible for the Canadian team, originally scheduled the initial four games in Canada beginning the first week in September, 1972. The four return games were set for Sept. 22, 24, 26 and 28 in Russia.

NHL President Clarence Campbell said, however, "The governors have agreed that the home games were set much too early and we are negotiating to play the home games at the thinnest part of the regular NHL schedule. We have proposed the 7, 9, 13 and 17 of November. We have no objections to going to Russia on the already established dates.

"Even though the games were set up by Hockey Canada, the consent of participation by all teams in unanimous from all governors," Campbell added.

General manager Milt Schmidt of the Boston Bruins said he would like to see the series moved to a still later date.

"We should play in midseason," Schmidt said. "After all, the Russians will be in top shape and a training period in August for a September series is much too early for our players."

In addition to dealing with the Canada-Russia series their Tuesday meeting, the governors also discussed current and future expansion of the NHL.

Campbell presented formal certificates of league membership to Roy Boe, owner of the New York Islanders, and Bill Putnam, president of the Atlanta Flames. Both teams will officially begin play in the 1972-73 season.

With regard to further expansion for the 1974-75 season, Campbell said, "That's the most important topic on our agenda and we hope to reach a final conclusion by Thursday. However, if we feel that our decision will take any longer, then we will hold the meetings over for an extra day and then hand down the verdict on Friday."

Cleveland, Cincinnati and Kansas City all have forwarded strong franchise applications, but only two will be accepted by the Board of Governors.

Campbell also announced that discussions between the clubs and the Players Association were proceeding well.

"We are hopeful of reaching a long term deal with the players," Campbell said.

In other business, referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison announced the retirement of senior referee John Ashley. Ashley served as a referee with the NHL for 13 seasons.

"It's too bad Ashley decided to retire at the age of 42," Morrison said. "At that age basketball referees and baseball umpires are just breaking into officiating as rookies."

In his tribute, Campbell said, "John Ashley served with dignity, dedication and integrity. But he showed enormous courage."

There was no indication if Ashley, who is presently vacationing in Europe, would stay in sports or might possibly join the New World Hockey Association.

Ashley had the distinction of being the only referee to work the seventh and final games of three of the NHL's playoff series this past season.

Orr seen fit after operation

BOSTON (UPI)—Bobby Orr, the Most Valuable Player in the 1972 National Hockey League playoffs, underwent a three-hour operation on his ailing left knee Tuesday and the Boston Bruins said later they expected their star defenseman to be back on skates for the opening of training camp in September.

Dr. Carter Rowe, who performed the surgery, said several portions of knee cartilage and spurs were removed from Orr's inner knee. Orr was reported "resting comfortably" at Massachusetts General Hospital after the operation.

Rowe, who termed the operation an "overall cleanup," said he foresees no problems.

Spiritual change

By Jean Adams

LETDOWN: (Q.) Recently I went on a church retreat. In the five days I was there, I came closer to God than I have ever been. Everyone there was my brother. They still are. I have never felt so much love for a group of people.

But now, when I think back on the retreat, I become extremely depressed. I cry. I asked my youth director, who was there, about this. He said I am depressed because I had such a high spiritual experience and I know now that on this earth I can never again be in exactly the same situation with exactly that same group.

I did not ask my youth director about my boy friend. He was not a member of the group. He is not even a member of my church. And since I returned I haven't felt the same about him.

I keep pushing him aside and thinking about some of the guys on the retreat. Every one of them except the youth director, who is 28 and married, is younger than I am, so I am not saying I want to go out with them. But still I keep thinking that maybe I don't like my boy friend any more.

He has always been extra nice to me, and I do not have any other boy I think might ask me out. So should I wait and if someone asks me out that I like then tell him? Or should I tell him now?

Closer to God But Farther From My Guy in Oklahoma.

(A.) It is human after a highly uplifting experience to have a letdown when you find yourself back in the old familiar everyday scene.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts have similar experiences after exciting adventures. So do members of football teams after big trips. The same thing goes for explorers and mountain climbers and soldiers and probably even astronauts.

They all discover that peaks can be climbed but it is not possible to stay at the crest indefinitely.

They realize they are human, and have limitations. That is what is happening to you. You have also turned in a new direction and your boy friend did not turn with you. This adds to your letdown.

This does not mean that you should drop him right away. It does mean that you recognize a natural break in your life and that you should start looking for someone — not necessarily one of the boys on the retreat—who can share your direction and your conviction.

I have always strongly urged dating and marriage in the same faith where possible. I urge the same for you.

Dentist reaction

My new dentist gave me a questionnaire to fill out on my first visit and when I got to question no. 37, I paused momentarily. It asked, "Are you interested in saving your teeth?"

My first reaction was, where were they 20 years ago when my body was starting to go. Aloud to the nurse I said, "A commitment is not something I take lightly, you know. Frankly, I don't know if I can take on another cause or not. Already I am saving the California redwoods, saving my glass bottles and newspapers for recycling, saving the whooping crane, and saving myself for Paul Newman. Let me think about it."

For the last ten years I have been caught up in a series of crusades ranging from saving the frontage of an historic cemetery from a land developer who wanted to erect a fruit drink stand with a neon sign reading "GO REFRESHED" to saving our children from centerfolds.

Suppose I did decide to save my teeth. The first thing I would have to do is engage eight or ten of my friends to join with me in the cause. (Crusaders are like Nuns. They always travel in pairs or groups.)

Then we would form a car pool. Even if we never needed a car pool, we would fulfill the first obligation of a committee.

After that, we would elect officers and select a catchy series of letters that would spell out a word, but still explain our cause. (Usually this is done before an organization is even conceived.) We would call ourselves something dramatic like ROTTEN (Reach Out To Teeth. End Neglect.) A charter would be drawn up to list the aims and goals of the organization and immediate plans would be made for a bake sale to build a treasury so the group could visit Williamsburg.

A publicity chairman would be named to make public the work of ROTTEN. Eventually, we would entice a national figure to sit in a director's chair and make an appeal on our behalf.

Subsequently, ROTTEN chapters would start all over the country to save Erma's teeth. There would be a convention in Detroit and we would all gather to eat fattening foods, drink Vodka for lunch and run our charges up. Being the founder, I would have to travel around the country installing new officers and miss my six-months dental check-up.

My children, lonely from neglect, would turn to Miss Louise, a physical education teacher, and a frequent visitor to the house at the invitation of my husband.

On a rare trip home, my youngest would answer the door and say to me, "Leave a vegetable brush and come back later. Mama isn't home."

Everything I had worked for . . . my home, my family and my sexy teeth would be gone. I looked at the questionnaire and marked, "No I am not interested in saving my teeth." Under explanation, I wrote, "Ask Louise!"

Oldtimer likes real old pros

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It sounds like a poster of coming attractions for the local Bijou in the 1930s:

"Lonely Hearts 555" starring Rosalind Russell, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Maureen O'Sullivan—plus "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate" with Helen Hayes, Myrna Loy, Sylvia Sidney and Mildred Natwick.

But it's not 1930. Nor is it movies.

The titles and the players are 1972. Television. And the man responsible for them is Lee Rich, co-owner of Lorimar Productions, who gets more miles out of oldtimers than all the vitamins in the medicine chest.

Rich is no chicken himself, but he has been around show business most of his life as a packager of television shows with advertising agencies and production companies.

Given his choice, he'll go along with seasoned veterans every time.

Helen Hayes won an Emmy nomination for her performance in "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate." Rich sees other nominations ahead for "Lonely Hearts 555."

"Working with real professionals like these people is a terrific kick," said Rich after completing his production with Miss Russell and Fairbanks. "They know what they're doing at all times.

"When we finished up, Roz said her eyes have finally been opened to working in television. She's never done a movie for television before. She couldn't get over completing a movie in only 12 days.

"Neither Roz nor Fairbanks need the work. But we sent them the script and each one liked the roles so much they agreed."

"People like Helen Hayes and Myrna Loy have reached a state in life where they're ready to work if they like a part, and can skip it if they don't. That's not the case with younger actors proving themselves."

Italian-American League fell with Colombo

By STANLEY PENN
Dow Jones - Ottaway News

NEW YORK — Just over a year ago the Italian-American Civil Rights League was riding high.

At the national office in a handsome suite in Manhattan, league officials were celebrating their publicized coup in persuading a movie producer to delete the words Mafia and Cosa Nostra from the script of "The Godfather." And the league's coffers were flush; a single rally had raised $500,000.

Today, things are different. The league's headquarters now are in a storefront office in Bensonhurst, a working-class section of Brooklyn.

The principal architect of last year's league successes, Mafia Boss Joe Colombo Sr., is incapacitated as a result of wounds he suffered in an attempt on his life. And much of the money seems to have vanished.

All this may have dealt a serious blow to the league and to its highly touted, ambitious charitable projects, such as a proposed non-profit hospital for the needy, in Brooklyn, and its children's camp in New York's Ulster County.

Construction on the hospital hasn't begun, and it's doubtful that the institution ever will be built; the children's camp isn't expected to reopen this summer.

The league tried to raise money by holding a big benefit show, scheduled last Sunday night, at Madison Square Garden. Frank Sinatra, who appeared at the league's immensely profitable show in November 1970, wasn't there this time.

But husky-voiced Jimmy Durante promised to show up, and Sammy Davis Jr. was "committed" to attend, says Sy Marsh, a business associate. "Sammy's a member of the league," he explains.

The league is expected to use some of the proceeds of the Sunday benefit to pay off debts. Its financial difficulties came to light in a federal court in Brooklyn last month when the league and two of its officers were indicted for fraudulently obtaining a $6,000 bank loan.

The officers were Nat Marcone, president, and Caesar Vitale, secretary-treasurer. They were charged with falsely swearing on a loan application with Kings Lafayette Bank that the league hadn't any outstanding debts at a time it assertedly owed over $82,000 to more than 20 merchants, many of them suppliers of goods and services last year to Camp Unity, the summer camp for youngsters.

Just about a year ago, law enforcement officials say, the league had well over $1 million in some major New York City banks. "Many of the accounts have been closed," a government investigator says, "and a lot of the money has gone down the drain." Investigators now are trying to determine just how and where it went.

A year ago, the League's three top officers — president Marcone, secretary-treasurer Vitale, and vice president Anthony Colombo, Joe's eldest son — were collecting salaries of $300 a week plus expenses.

Meanwhile, according to law enforcement officials, some league officials have made several trips to gambling resorts in the Bahamas and Puerto Rico.

Are the salaries and expenses still being paid? Were the trips to the islands financed by the league? Repeated efforts to get league officials to discuss these questions have been fruitless.

One reason they couldn't talk, according to women who answered the telephone at the league's headquarters, is that they were too busy preparing for Sunday's rally.

Except for that benefit, the league's activities seem to have scaled down. Little more than a year ago, when it claimed 40,000 members and 500 to 700 new ones each week, it boasted 25 chapters, most in New York.

Now some of these chapters appear to have become inactive. Telephone service has been discontinued for at least two chapters in the Bronx, and a reporter could find no sign of the chapter that once occupied an office on Spring Street in Manhattan's Little Italy.

Talks with Italian-American merchants in Bensonhurst also suggest that the league has slowed down. One says nobody had come around peddling tickets — priced $5, $10 to $25 — for the Sunday benefit. Another recalls having been solicited for a $5 contribution to the league last year. "But nobody's been around lately," he says.

Joe Colombo formed the league in 1970 to fight what he called harassment by federal agents and alleged slurs against Italian-Americans in newspapers and on television.

Law enforcement officials contend he duped many law-abiding people into joining the league in a scheme aimed in part at gaining respectability and bringing political pressure to bear against investigations into his Mafia activities.

When he was wounded last year — by a gunman hired by a rival Mafia faction, according to some accounts — he was under separate federal indictments for income tax evasion and for running a gambling syndicate. He has pleaded innocent to both.

Movie melange

'The Other' satisfying movie

By BRUCE COOK
Dow Jones - Ottaway News

The many thousands who have read Tom Tryon's "The Other" since it was published last year are not likely to be disappointed by the satisfying movie (20th Century-Fox) that he has made of it in collaboration with the talented director Robert Mulligan.

This tale of pernicious mischief, obsession, and possession has lost none of its terror in its translation to the screen; if anything, with the added impact of the visual medium — which makes specific all that might only have been vaguely imagined in reading — the film seems more brutally horrible than the book.

The focus is still on the 10-year-old twins, Niles and Holland Perry — played by Chris and Martin Udvarnoky, who have had no previous acting experience yet carry the film with excellent and amazingly professional performances.

At the heart of the story is Niles' relationship with his Russian grandmother Ada, impersonated with style and sensitivity by Uta Hagen. She has trained the boy's powers of imaginative projection to mediumistic acuity: By playing "The Game," the boy can apparently enter the consciousness of any living being.

But it's a two-way street. His own consciousness is invaded and thus follows the chain of grisly "accidents" and mysterious occurrences with which the movie is concerned.

Perhaps the only real trouble with the movie version of "The Other" is that these deaths with which Niles Perry and his brother are mysteriously linked seem to come on in rather rapid succession, so that it begins to seem slightly ludicrous that the truth goes unsuspected until the end.

Robert Mulligan is surely the perfect director for the film. He has a touch in working with children and young people in movies (To Kill a Mockingbird, Up The Down Staircase, and Summer of '42 were all his) that no other film maker today can match.

The other works as well as it does, I think, because he never forgets that whatever else it may be, it is a movie about children.

For children? See it first and judge for yourself.

---

The Legend of Nigger Charley (Paramount) is a film you may just as well skip, but it does deserve mention on a couple of counts. For one thing, director Martin Goldman is a fugitive from commercial films who clearly has a future in features; the film is so well visualized that fom time to time it's impossible to forget how terribly bad the script is. (It has to do with a runaway slave who finds a life for himself on the frontier as a gunfighter.)

The cast also manages a bit of that something-out-of-nothing magic: Fred Williamson as Nigger Charley, Don Pedro Colley as his sidekick, and Tricia O'Neil as a lady in distress are worthy of mention.

There are things about the film that suggest — to me, at least — that it was done as a TV pilot. So wait for it on the tube.

Business starting to hum, but wait 'til '73

By ALFRED L. MALABRE JR.
Dow Jones—Ottaway News

NEW YORK — One of President Nixon's most fervent election-year wishes is coming true: Business in the U.S. is beginning to hum.

Trouble could develop sometime in 1973, but by then the November elections will be history.

Reports emerging from Washington's statistical mills, most forecasters agree, leave no doubt that the sluggish recovery from the 1970 recession has at long last been replaced by a period of vigorous economic growth that should continue for many months. Such familiar problems as unemployment and inflation won's disappear, analysts caution, but they will constitute waning worries. At the same time, they add, such broad segments of the economy as consumer and business spending should keep expanding briskly.

"The economy has finally embarked on an expansionary course," declares Norman Robertson, chief economist of Mellon National Bank and Trust Co. "The majority of economic signals are clearly pointing to a strong and broadly based expansion." An Argus Research Corp. economist says that "nothing in sight appears likely to knock the economy off its expansionary track" before election-time.

Farther down the road, however, the going could become less pleasant. Analysts are just starting to peer into 1973, and their conclusions are necessarily tenuous. Some see another banner year, but others fear economic difficulties.

"Economic activity will continue fairly strong during most of the first half of 1973," predicts Don Conlan, chief economist of Dean Witter, but "later in 1973 we will be approaching a quasi-recessionary condition — consumer spending will lose steam, capital outlays should begin to decelerate, corporate profits will have peaked out."

Growth accelerating

Widespread optimism about the more immediate future derives largely from an increasing array of statistical evidence that business growth is sharply accelerating. Perhaps the most notable sign has been the recent performance of the U.S. government's index of leading indicators, statistical yardsticks that normally foreshadow the movement of such broader economic measures as employment, factory production and plant-and-equipment spending. The index rose 1.4 per cent in April, on top of a 1.9 per cent gain in March. Both are usually sharp gains.

Other economic yardsticks, many of which have long lagged, are also beginning to climb steeply, analysts say. An economist at Irving Trust Co. sums up the general reaction to such broad evidence of U.S. economic strength: "The sheer momentum of the current upturn almost guarantees that business will continue to expand strongly for the rest of this year." A segment-by-segment review of this emerging strength follows:

Consumer spending is running at a record annual rate of more than $720 Billion, some $50 Billion higher than a year ago. The fast pace has developed despite the fact that taxes have been mistakenly overwithheld in millions of paychecks. Spending for durable goods is especially strong. Sales of U.S.-made cars may reach nine-million units this year, a record, and sales of such other durable goods as appliances and furniture are running some 15 per cent ahead of the 1971 pace.

By no coincidence, the rate of consumer saving has dropped considerably—to seven per cent of after-tax income in the first quarter from as high as 8.6 per cent in the second quarter of 1971. But most analysts view the latest rate as above normal, providing an ample cushion for a continued high level of consumer outlays.

Business spending up

Business spending also is moving upward sharply after a long, sluggish period. Outlays for new plant and equipment will climb 14 per cent this year, according to a recent McGraw-Hill survey. Last year, such expenditures rose less than two per cent. If price increases are taken into account, last year's total actually declined slightly. Currently, such spending is running at an annual rate of about $90 Billion, a record, and some $10 Billion higher than a year ago. Capital outlays have "emerged as a major driving force in the 1972 economy," says Mellon Bank's Robertson. An economist of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. remarks: "Plant and equipment spending is a strong plus in the outlook."

A few analysts, it should be noted, question whether such a sharp rise in capital outlays will materialize. They point out that some 25 per cent of U.S. production capacity is idle, according to recent Federal Reserve Board surveys. More optimistic economists contend, however, that these surveys exaggerate the amount of capacity that is unused by including facilities really obsolete. A more realistic figure, these analysts say, is 10 per cent or 15 per cent. Also, some economists note that the percentage of idle capacity reported in the Federal Reserve surveys has very recently begun to edge down. They anticipate that this decline will accelerate in coming months.

Business spending for inventories also is expected to provide a strong plus for the economy in the months ahead. Businessmen have kept their inventories extraordinarily lean during the recovery so far. But now, with the economic pace clearly gaining speed, more hefty inventory levels appear necessary to keep pace with demand.

Jobs climb

Employment is another segment of the economy registering strong gains. In the first quarter, nonfarm payrolls rose more than 800,000, and over the six months ended in April, the nonfarm job total rose at an annual rate of 3.7 per cent. During much of 1971, in contrast, the total rose sluggishly and, in some months, actually declined. At the same time, the average factory months, actually declined. At the same time, the average factory workweek and the hours of overtime have been on the rise.

As a result, personal income has scored some substantial gains in recent months. The overall total rose at an annual rate of 11 per cent in the first quarter, going above $900 Billion for the first time. In addition, after barely budging for several years, "real" weekly pay — the actual purchasing power of weekly paychecks after taxes and inflation have been taken into account — has recently been setting records.

Corporate profits have been rising sharply in recent months, and most analysts expect the rise to continue, though at a slightly reduced rate, in the months ahead. Limits on profit-margin gains imposed from time to time by the price commission aren't viewed as seriously crimping the overall increase. In the first quarter, after-tax profits of manufacturing companies showed particular strength, climbing about 20 per cent above the year-earlier total. Overall after-tax profits rose 17 per cent. A few analysts see the rate of gain remaining at about the 17 per cent level through the rest of the year. Many share the general view of Alan Greenspan, a New York economist, who predicts that "profit figures are on the right track for strong gains throughout the year, as volume continues to improve."

The gains thus far, it's stressed, result largely from volume increases. Greenspan remarks; "Productivity has been sluggish, and wage costs have been rising.

Stock prices tend to move in the same direction, at roughly the same time, as corporate profits. Most economists believe the months ahead will be no exception. Noting that "corporate earnings continue to come through quite nicely," Raymond F. Devoe, an economist at Spencer Trask and Co., comments that "this time it looks like" the Dow—Jones industrial stock average should make it through the 1,000 level.

Optimism about the outlook for stock prices also comes from Conlan of Dean Witter. "The stock market could easily rise to 1,000" on the Dow Jones industrial average later this year, the economist estimates. Among stock categories that seem particularly attractive to him are insurance, machinery and machine tools, electrical equipment and electronics, major computer manufacturers, auto makers and real estate and land development concerns.

Conlan's much less op*timistic appraisal of the 1973* outlook is shared by many analysts, though probably not a majority. John W. Wright, president of Wright Investors' Service, agrees with Conlan that the odds favor "A new high by the Dow Jones industrial average" before this year is out. But he also warns that "1973 may, however, be another matter."

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 NT | Pass |
| 4 ♠ | Dble | | |

Opening lead — jack of hearts.

Let's say you're West and that South jumps to four spades after his partner responds with a notrump.

Whether you should double depends almost entirely on how well you know South's game. If he is a good card player, you will do best in the long run by passing. A double would alert him to your trump holding, and that in itself might enable him to bring home the contract. He would know the trumps were bunched against him and he might be able to endplay you to make the hand.

But if South is not a good card player, the double would probably come out all right. He might be the kind of card player who wouldn't know an endplay from a Wiener schnitzel, in which case he would eventually lose three trump tricks and go down one.

The hand occurred in a masters pair championship and quite a few Wests doubled four spades when it was bid. How successful they were depended on how well South performed his task.

Those declarers who appreciated the significance of the double arranged for a trump endplay and thus made the contract. The sequence of plays varied somewhat, but in general it followed this pattern:

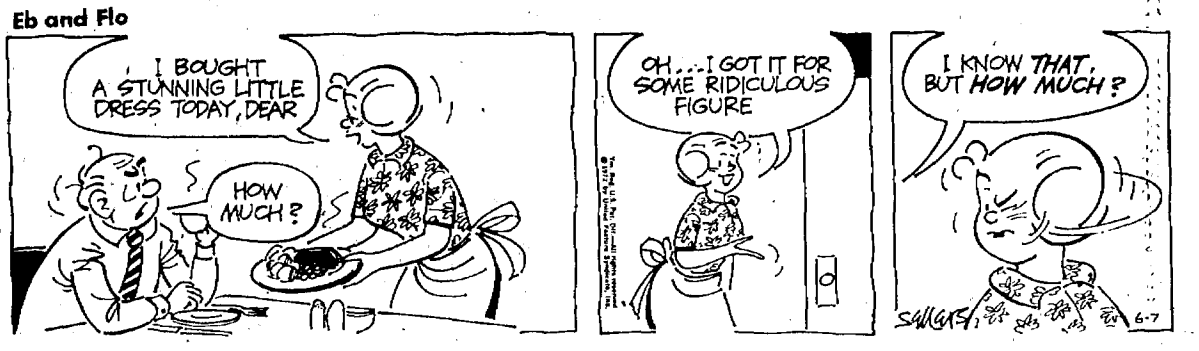

South won the heart lead with the ace, cashed the A-K of clubs, and played the king of diamonds. West took the ace and led another heart.

Declarer won with the king, ruffed a club, cashed the Q-J of diamonds, discarding a heart, and ruffed dummy's last diamond.

Nine tricks having been played — the defense having won only one of them — South and West each had four trumps left. South now played the jack of spades and West found it impossible to win more than two trump tricks.

Eckley reflects downfall

Anthracite industry on hard times

By BOB HARWOOD
Dow Jones — Ottaway News

ECKLEY, Pa. — Coal towns aren't expected to be model cities. But it's difficult to be prepared for the devastation that is found here.

Huge mesas of black slag waste and ponds of stagnant water surround this decrepit village 20 miles south of Wilkes-Barre.

In Eckley itself, two rows of bleak, unpainted clapboard houses huddle together along the village's only street. The mammoth black "breaker," or coal preparation plant, which dominates the town, stands idle.

If Eckley looks like some sort of grotesque monument to the days when coal was king in Pennsylvania, that's what is intended. For the whole village is a state museum commemorating anthracite, the once-important hard coal.

But in addition to preserving history, this shell town also symbolizes the grim condition of a dying industry — and the plight of the "forgotten people" who still depend upon it.

While the nation's appetite for fuel grows and grows, few American industries have shrunk as much as the anthracite coal business. In Pennsylvania where the industry is located, the number of companies mining anthracite coal plummeted to 285 last year from 1,210 only a decade earlier.

The nation is expected to mine only eight million tons of hard coal this year, less than half the amount only eight years ago. The whole industry today supports only 5,000 miners.

It's all a dramatic change from the turn of the century, when anthracite heated nearly every home, store, and factory east of the Mississippi River. In 1917, the industry's biggest year, 156,000 miners picked and blasted 100 million tons of anthracite from this hilly region.

Since those days, when Northeastern Pennsylvania was the center of the nation's fuel supply, steel mills, utilities, and other major coal users have turned to less costly bituminous (soft) coal. And for home use of course, oil, gas, and electric supplies long ago replaced the coal bin.

If the industry isn't prospering, neither are its workers. Until a new three-year United Mine Workers contract was signed last month, members working in anthracite mines averaged only $21 a day — a pay rate that had remained almost stagnant since the late 1950s.

The new rate is $26 a day, and in 1974 it will increase to $29 daily. By contrast, a contract the UMW won last year will boost the average daily rate for bituminous workers to $50 in 1974 from the current $41.

Moreover, of the nation's 5,000 anthracite workers, only 3,000 belong to the UMW. (The remaining 200,000 UMW members are predominantly bituminous coal workers). The 2,000 non-unionized hard coal workers generally get fewer benefits than their UMW counterparts.

Compared to bituminous miners, the anthractie workers suffer partly from geology. Anthracite is found in undulating or "wavy" seams, which makes mechanization all but impossible.

Underground mining here means blasting coal loose and often dragging it to a central point where it can be lifted to the surface. The labor is back-breaking, and the productivity is low.

While a miner in a heavily mechanized bituminous operation can bring out 20 tons of coal a day, the anthracite worker digs only 7.5 tons a day. This, of course, depresses anthracite wages.

But even with its low wage base, anthracite is more costly to mine than bituminous. Hard coal thus sells for $15 to $18 a ton — more than double the current price for the cheapest grades of soft coal.

Faced with such cost differtials, a number of anthracite companies are closing their underground mines in favor of lower-cost strip-mining of anthracite. In strip mining, the soil is stripped away from the surface and coal is mined from the open pit. Strip operations reduce the number of miners required. This in turn adds to a dramatic problem in a seemingly mundane area: pensions.

GM car can take it

Dow Jones-Ottaway News

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. announced its experimental safety car, designed and built under a contract for the federal government, has passed its most crucial test, a 50-mile-per-hour collision into a barrier, with satisfactory protection to its simulated passengers.

About a year ago, GM gave a preliminary report on its car in which it said it hadn't, up to that point, been able to keep test dummies "alive" in such a crash.

Government specifications call for test dummies in such crashes to be subjected to no more than certain forces. If these forces are exceeded, the dummies are presumed to have been killed. GM engineers have said, however, there is a difference of scientific opinion about exactly how well the forces measured on dummies correlate to human injuries. GM said its cars have yielded forces on dummies within the target range specified by the government.

A 50-mile-an-hour crash into a fixed barrier is considered equal to a crash at 100 miles an hour into a parked car of about the same size and weight. Survival of the 50-mile-an-hour barrier crash, a 50-mile-an-hour crash into a pole, and other severe crashes are among the specifications of the government's experimental safety car program.

GM originally planned to deliver to the government two examples of its safety car for the department of transportation to independently crash-test and evaluate. But, the company said, it has decided to increase the number to five so that the government will be able to conduct more complete testing and evaluation, particularly in crash tests, which in most cases destroy a vehicle.

GM said it has crash-tested nine of its safety vehicles itself and run two bumper tests. GM said it was also turning data from these over to the government for evaluation.

The objective of the experimental vehicle project is to come up with new ideas and approaches for improving safety of future cars. GM said its experimental car, though it met the crash specification, turned out to be 400 to 500 pounds overweight, used large amounts of special quality steel and aluminum and was too costly and complex to be mass-produced as a complete vehicle.

Watershed measures progress

HARRISBURG — Local projects for flood prevention and water supply are making real progress in Pennsylvania, according to State Conservationist Benny Martin of the Soil Conservation Service.

Martin said, 47 dams have been built in the 23 watershed projects authorized by the U.S. Congress. Seven dams will be built this year. One of the seven dams being built in the state this year is in Monroe County on Goose Pond Run north of Canadensis. The Canadensis area was badly flooded in 1955 and again in 1969.

The dams are important measures in watershed projects which are aimed at improving the economic conditions of up-stream communities. In addition to controlling floods, many of the dams store water for municipal and industrial uses, recreation, and fish and wildlife habitat.

The state conservationist said watershed projects include conservation practices on the farm and non-farm lands to control erosion and to reduce stream sedimentation. These measures improve water quality and recreational stream uses. They are helping to improve the quality of the environment in Pennsylvania, Martin added.

To date, 33 counties in the state have submitted applications for watershed projects covering over two million acres of land. The local sponsors are assisted in developing and completing the projects by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and other federal and state agencies.

What tips are all about

GILBERT — Are you one of those people who over tip? Do you know what the word tip means?

According to the Monroe County Extension Service, most people tip in a restaurant only because they think it is expected.

The service says "TIPS" originally meant, "To Insure Prompt Service," and if the consumer remembers this he can improve the quality of service if he tips in proportion to the services he receives.

Several considerations should be made according to the agency. First the consumer should consider the attitude of the waitress.

If she acknowledges your presence immediately, the chances are that she is anxious to serve you. (However, immediate service may be impossible because of help shortages, kitchen delays or other problems beyond her control.)

The service suggests that "a friendly smile is a good measure of a good waitress." Expressions from her such as "Thank you," "Is Everything All Right," or "Please Come Again" usually indicate she is sincere.

"The appearance of the dining area, the neatness of the waitress, and especially, the arrangement of the food on the plate all contribute to the enjoyment of the meals you eat away from home," said the service.

KUNKLETOWN — Anyone interested in cutting the grass at St. Matthew's Cemetery in Kunkletown should submit a bid to the Lutheran or United Church of Christ council. Bids are to be per cutting and should indicate if the bidder will use his own equipment or the churches. No one under 18 will be considered for the job.

E.S. man appointed commander

EAST STROUDSBURG — Henry B. Kulp, R.D. 3, East Stroudsburg, past commander of Samuel S. Yohe Commandery 81, Stroudsburg, has been appointed Division Commander of Division 9, Knights of Templar of Pennsylvania.

The appointment was made by Senior Knight Russell R. Robinson, Right Eminent Grand Commander, at the 119th Grand Conclave in Johnstown, Pa.

Division Nine is comprised of Commanderies in Bethlehem, Jim Thorpe, Easton, Stroudsburg and two units each in Reading and Allentown.

Kulp has served as master in Barger Lodge 325, Stroudsburg; high priest in Monroe Royal Arch Chapter 281, Stroudsburg; thrice illustrous master in Bethlehem Council 36 and commander of the Yohe Commandery in Stroudsburg.

He also has been very active in Boy Scouts and is a recipient of the Silver Beaver Award for 22 years work in Boy Scout circles. He has also been active in church functions.

Depot keys for priority operation

TOBYHANNA — Army Materiel Command has the prime responsibility for maintaining the worldwide automatic digital network of the Department of Defense Communications System and Tobyhanna Army Depot is keyed for this vital mission, supplying repair parts and technicians to keep the system in continuous operation.

The system, which consists of more than a dozen switching centers and 116 digital subscriber terminal sites, provides documented communications for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

M. Sgt. Richard Matulis says, "We're ready to go anywhere on a moment's notice." He noted that, since September 1969, when Tobyhanna received this mission, its technicians have traveled more than 10 million miles on regular and emergency service calls.

The depot also has a homebased force that performs repair and overhaul of major Autodin components.

M. Sgt. Matulis, who has worked with this equipment overseas, explains that a Tobyhanna team is almost constantly on duty in Vietnam. Sometimes the technicians have to move on quick notice from a steaming Southeast Asia base to Korea or even Alaska.

The sergeant comments, "It takes getting used to, but when the U.S. builds its first station on the moon, you can bet we'll be there soon thereafter."

Match paper, curtain

Particularly in a small bathroom, the idea of being able to match paper and shower curtain is a neat trick. It not only adds continuity of design, but a genuine "decorator" touch.

Your Horoscope

GEMINI

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — A good spot for your aggressive forces, your alertness and inventiveness. Do use them for sound purposes.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — An auspicious outlook for those who are keen of eye and willing of hand, for good efforts ably channeled. Romance favored.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — You may have a disagreeable situation to deal with, or some complex situation. But your optimism and know-how will turn things to advantage — if you remain up to standard.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Better-than-average influences. Look at your record thoroughly. Where can you inject a new, refreshing note, better strategy? NOW is the time!

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Surge forward confidently, but not with abruptness. Speak with surety, but with tact. Presume and assume only after careful, thorough study of situations.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Some persons may try to put over dubious schemes. The Virgoan is usually above such tactics, but be careful not to fall into a trap now. Some dandy advantages!

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Augment your efforts of those of others with whatever is available in sound devices, methods and production step-up. New opportunities indicated. Prepare!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — You won't be able to accompish all you desire, so don't try to crowd yourself or others. Stay "on target" — competent, but not pressured.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Shun breakneck speed, but neither delay nor be tardy in action. Both extremes, and others MUST be curbed.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Put past doubts, disappointments behind you; they only put limits on future progress. You could now add the "twist" that boosts projects to success.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Analyses, conjectures, decisions must be given plenty of time in order to prevent errors. Be alert. Artistic persuits highly favored.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Your innately good style, demeanor and cooperative attitude can win laurels. In difference or reluctance however, will surely disenchant others and hurt your cause. So . . . your best!

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with unusual individuality, originality and adaptability. Your governing planet, Mercury, indicates alertness and versatility, but you are often dissatisfied with your own accomplishments. A perfectionist at heart, you often feel disheatened because you feel you "could have done better." Never lose confidence in yourself. Foster your talent for sensing the needs of others and knowing how to cope with unwieldly situations. You usually work best when you're "on your own" but are more than cooperative when need be. Your thirst for knowledge is all-consuming. Nourish it, since the greater your education, the higher your accomplishments. "Good Grief . . . Mom put in another Classified Ad!"

"You think the last time would have been enough. What an experience! People came and took away my bassinette. (So, it was a little small.) They took the sterilizer. They even took all the furniture that used to be in the spare room. Dad? Oh, he was a BIG help. He thought Mom was so smart he even kissed her, for heaven's sake!"

"Yep . . . She did it! There goes the phone again!"

"Maybe if I could get those folks at the Pocono Record to stop making it so easy to place an ad it would help. You see, all Mom did was make a list of that good stuff we really weren't using anymore. Then she dialed 421-3000 and told somebody called, 'that nice Ad Visor' about it . . . Well, you know the rest. I heard her tell Dad that a 4-line ad for 4-Days was only $1.72 in the "Bargain Spot." Whatever that means."

"Of course, I'll have to say this. My new bed is pretty nice . . ."

"So, I suppose I shouldn't complain. You know, now that I think of it, seems like everybody around here is happier since Mom started using Pocono Record Classified Ads . . . 'Cept me, that is. Frankly, I wish she'd hurry up with my dinner!"

and . . . it cost a little to sell alot!

Worried about answering a blind box number ad? (because you don't know who the advertiser is?)

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads — since it may be your own firm — simply do this:
Place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose the names you do NOT want to receive your reply. If one of the companies (or individuals) you listed placed the ad, we will simply discard your reply.
Sorry, but we cannot return your letter without violating the confidence of our advertisers.
